Birds Sing on Sunday
The Little Man

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1928.)

MICHAEL J. HINCH, 18 years old, touched a live wire carrying 7,000 volts and, according to doctors, was "dead for half an hour." Quick action by firemen brought the boy back to life.

At first his mind wandered.

Then he recognized friends, knew his own name, who he was and what he had been doing in the previous 18 years.

The question arises, does the same thing happen to all of us, after we have been dead a long time, perhaps, as one earnest clergyman suggests, as long as a billion years, waiting for the world to end and Gabriel to summon us?

YOUNG gentlemen of Yale vote overwhelmingly for Secretary Hoover for President in 1928. The young men reflect, without knowing it, opinions of their fathers and other older men.

AMONG Democrats, Governor Smith, of New York, is the favorite, by a big majority.

Friends of Secretary Hoover should not start their race too early. Many a man has won three-quarters of a race with ease, but not the last quarter.

PITTSBURGH judges decide that Pittsburgh's symphony society may give concerts on Sunday, although the Allegheny County Sabbath Association calls the concerts wicked.

What about birds that sing on Sunday, and could not sing if the Lord did not approve? Are they wicked?

BANKING gentlemen tell the little man not to invest in stocks or even bonds, but put his money in savings banks.

That reminds you of the little boy who didn't want his sister to kill the big bluebottle fly. He wanted to kill it.

If bonds and stocks, industrial and others, yield profits good for big concerns, why not give the little man a chance?

HOW many millions have Frederick H. Ecker, of the Metropolitan Life Company; President Mitchell, of the National City Bank; President Gianinni, of the Bank of Italy and Bancitaly Corporation, and dozens of others made for their stockholders by wise bond and stock investments?

Mr. Mitchell made millions for his bank, buying government bonds below par, when little people were unloading them.

Why not a committee of honest financiers to tell the little people what to buy, safely?

GREAT BRITAIN is "watching the United States carefully, suspecting an American challenge for world supremacy."

This country doesn't particularly want any world supremacy. Plenty of room, plenty to do on these two American continents. But if anybody must have world supremacy, why not the United States? This is a real empire and will last.

THE Emperor of Japan sets an example in economy—carries a $5 watch, cultivates his own rice field. That would surprise his great-great-grandfather. That Mikado, by lifting a finger, could chop off anybody's head, and he did.

JAPANESE discover that western methods bring in western agitation. Politics in Japan is divided into eight parties now, including four labor parties. That calls for thought.

Here we haven't even one labor party, and worry about Bolshevism.

BUSINESS men take one look at the stock market page, see that stocks closed strong on Saturday, opened stronger yesterday, with call money, used for speculation, lending at 3½ per cent. That's all they want to know. Poor bears.

BRIBE HALTS TRIAL

Judge George V. Moore dismissed a jury in a $25,000 damage suit against the city of Pittsburgh today after Andrew McDonald of Stedman street, Negro witness for the plaintiff, informed the court in chambers that he had been offered $100 by two Negroes "to change my story or leave town."

The Negro was to have testified that he picked up Lawrence Norton, 58, of 604 Arch street, blind, after he had fallen and broken his leg in front of 1211 Fulton street, North Side, January 21, 1926. His testimony, it was learned, had to do with how long the snow and ice had been permitted to lie on the sidewalk.

Trial was begun yesterday.

Today McDonald asked to confer with Judge Moore, and the two, with Assistant City Solicitor Benjamin Steinberg, representing the city, and Attorney H. Fred Mercer, for the plaintiff, conferred in chambers, where the Negro told his story. The court, after hearing the story, at once ordered the case continued and the jury discharged.

Robert J. White, one of the fugitives, was recaptured this afternoon in a brick yard where, he said, he was waiting for a peddler to bring him some narcotics. White was the first of the fugitives to be recaptured.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 24—Clarence Chamberlin, famed trans-Atlantic flier, landed at the airport here at 11:26 a. m., exactly 76 minutes after he left Allentown, 90 miles east of here today.

Three escort planes, sent out from Harrisburg to meet him, missed the flier en route and he landed here unescorted.

The tiny Sperry messenger biplane averaged approximately 75 miles an hour in perfect flying weather.

LETTER GIVES CLUE

By International News Service.

DETROIT, Jan. 24.—A letter demanding $40,000 for the return of Frances St. John Smith, New York society girl and student at Smith College, is in the hands of Detroit police, and a search is being made for its sender.

The letter was received by the parents of the Smith College student who disappeared from the dormitory at Northampton, Mass.

It was signed Mitchell R. Spring. On the outside of the envelope was written the Detroit address to which the police fliers were sent today.

The house was found to contain no such person. A police guard is being maintained there now.

According to police, this letter is not the first one sent from Detroit to the Smiths regarding their daughter. They say another was received a week ago. Handwriting comparisons are to be made today to see if both were sent by the same person.

WOODS HOLE, Mass., Jan. 24.—Fifty state troopers today searched Cape Cod for Miss Frances St. John Smith, missing Smith College student.

The search was started following information given to Brig. Gen. Alfred E. Foote, commissioner of public safety, that a girl closely resembling Miss Smith stopped for four hours at a Buzzard's Bay hotel a week ago today and then boarded a train for this town.

The family of the missing girl revealed today that she once vaca-

Fannie Hurst Arrives to Write Of Conditions in Mining Camps

Fannie Hurst, famous novelist, arrived in Pittsburgh today and started at once on a tour of the district's mining camps. Her stories will appear exclusively in The Sun-Telegraph.

BLOCK WAR ON JOBS

Commissioner C. C. McGovern today opened war on "unnecessary county jobs" by asking elimination of the bureau of accounts and statistics, in charge of Gilbert C. Cloonan, with its dozen employes and annual payroll of $32,500.

He lost his first skirmish, as his fellow commissioners, E. V. Babcock and Joseph G. Armstrong, voted to retain the bureau, at least until the new system to be installed by Controller Robert G. Woodside "has been given a fair trial."

McGovern contended the bureau's work was a duplication of that performed by the County Controller. "Only a door separates the Commissioners' office from the Controller's office," said McGovern, "and any information we desire we should obtain in short order. This group of jobs is entirely unnecessary."

COURTHOUSE HIT

Estimates totaling $27,232 have been cut from original requests since the budget-making sessions started yesterday. The hardest department hit so far was the courthouse. The commissioners pared off more than $10,000 today from estimates asked.

The monotony of the budget making was broken when Justus Schroedel, superintendent of county buildings, explained the item, miscellaneous expense, submitted by him, included "milk for the courthouse cat, razor blades and toilet preparations for persons serving on juries.

"I never knew we had to buy razor blades and toilet water for juries," Commissioner Armstrong said. "This should be cut out."

When a halt was called, the commissioners had cut $2,550, but this saving was dissipated by $10,00

Story of the Coal Strike

* * * * * * * * *

[A full summary of the situation in the Pittsburgh district, written as a prelude to the stories by Fannie Hurst, which will appear exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.]

THIS is a history of the coal strike centering in Pittsburgh, the most serious labor disturbance, in respect to duration and number of men involved, that the United States has experienced, and one on the outcome of which, in the opinion of many thoughtful persons, the future of trade unionsim in this country depends. It is published today that the public may have clearer understanding of the points at issue and so be better able to appreciate the articles that Fannie Hurst, the famous novelist, is to write for The Sun-Telegraph this week, and in anticipation, also, of the expected Senatorial investigation.

THE STORY has been pieced from statements from both sides. It is largely a digest of the opposing utterances. Necessarily much has been omitted. Officers of the United Mine Workers of America and executives of the principal coal companies have been interviewed; documents and statistical data have been examined. In almost every particular there is conflict between the strikers' and the operators' statements. The fundamental question is the ability of the operators to pay the basic wage of $7.50 a day demanded by the miners, and back of that lie the problems of overproduction and of equitable railroad rates.

250,000 PERSONS ARE AFFECTED BY TIEUP IN BITUMINOUS FIELDS

The strike began in the mines of the largest bituminous operator, the Pittsburgh Coal Company, about two and a half years ago. Estimates of the number of men involved vary, but it is conceded that it runs into at least 50,000, and that on the average each striker has five dependents. With the passage of time the determination of both sides to stand firm, instead of diminishing, has apparently incerased. The pinch of poverty, which has manifested itself among the strikers in the last few months, has resulted in a condition of destitution recently described by the non-partisan clergymen's relief committee of Pittsburgh as "appalling," and has aroused nation-wide concern.

Philip Murray, international vice president of the United Mine Workers, has written a resume of the strike in which he begins with the conference of the union and operators at Jacksonville,

FANNIE HURST GREETED HERE

Eager for her study of the coal strike situation and its attendant misery of thousands of human beings in the families of the miners, Fannie Hurst, author and delver into the emotions of classes of mankind, came to Pittsburgh today to write her impressions for The Sun-Telegraph. Within an hour after she stepped from her train on arriving from New York, she plunged into her work.

"My heart and soul are in this work," Fannie Hurst declared to a group of Pittsburgh club women who greeted her at the Pennsylvania Station. "This is my greatest journalistic assignment and when I come here and glance around in this wonderful city it dawns upon me what an important task The Sun-Telegraph has imposed upon me.

"Did I say task? Please allow me to withdraw the word. It is indeed not a task but a very pleasant undertaking—an adventure into a new field—an adventure which I devoutly pray will result in some good for humanity."

"With an open mind to approach my assignment, I am going to write unbiased articles for The Sun-Telegraph. I regard this

Fla., in February, 1924, at which they agreed on the $7.50 wage rate. But the operators complain that it is not fair to begin the story at that point. The $7.50 scale was originally established, they say, in 1920.

In the beginning of 1917 the rate was $2.98. It was raised twice that year to $3.60 and $5. In 1919 it was raised to $5.70 and in 1920 to $6 and $7.50. The increase to $7.50 was made, they state, at a time when wages and prices were receding in other branches of commerce. Their point is that miners' wages were inflated when deflation was going on in business generally.

OPINIONS CLASH

Murray says that on April 15, 1925, the Pittsburgh Coal Company abrogated the contract "without assigning any particular reason for so doing, other than a desire to deflate wages." The operators rejoin that before going on an "open shop" basis the Pittsburgh Coal Company repeatedly asked John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, to consent to a readjustment of wages because the $7.50 scale prevented the company from selling coal at a price at which it would make a profit. It was steadily losing customers to southern operators. At that time, the operators say, coal could be bought in the non-union Southern West Virginia fields for less than it cost to produce it in the Pittsburgh district, and some of the local steel companies, which mine coal for their own uses, and not to sell, closed their mines and bought their coal from commercial operators in West Virginia, finding it cheaper than that which they themselves produced at cost.

"Had the Pittsburgh Coal Company respected the terms of its wage agreement," says Murray, "there would have been no strike in the coal areas of this country today."

"That is not true, so far as the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation is concerned," said Horace F. Baker, its president. "We would not have renewed the Jacksonville agreement, even if the Pittsburgh Coal Company had done so."

STRIKE IN 1925

At the same time that the Pittsburgh Coal Company severed relations with the union the Bethlehem Mines Corporation, subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, took similar action. The strike in the mines of these two companies has been under way, accordingly, since August 10, 1925.

Other companies that had signed the Jacksonville wage agreement continued to operate under it until its expiration on March 31, 1927. They refused to renew it and have since been operating on an "open shop" basis.

The largest of the Pittsburgh district companies in which the strike started on April 1 of last year are the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation, the Vesta Coal Company, a subsidiary of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation; the Bertha Consumers Company, operated by John H. Jones; the Youghiogheny and Ohio Coal Company, operated by H. S. Robbins of Cleveland; the Valley Camp Coal Company, by J. A. Paisley of Cleveland; the Union Collieries Company, by Frank S. Love; the Inland Collieries Company, operated by the Inland Steel Company of Chicago, and the Consumers Mining Company, operated by the Wheeling Steel Corporation. Many smaller companies are also involved in the strike.

Murray estimates the number of strikers as follows: In Pennsylvania, 85,000 (with 500,000 dependents), of whom 45,000 (with 225,000 dependents) are in the Pittsburgh district; in Ohio, 40,000 (with 200,000 dependents), and in Northern West Virginia, 26,000 (with 120,000 dependents), or a total of 151,000 strikers, with 820,000 dependents.

BRUTALITY TOLD

Colston E. Warne, assistant professor of economics of the University of Pittsburgh, who has made an exhaustive investigation of the strike and has visited numerous mines in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, estimates the number of strikers as follows: Pittsburgh district, 20,000, with 80,000 dependents; Central Pennsylvania, 10,000, with 40,000 dependents, and Ohio, 25,000, with 100,000 dependents, or a total of 55,000, with 220,000 dependents.

Murray devotes considerable attention in his report to the many brutalities to which he says the strikers have been subjected "at the hands of an imported army of professional gunmen" shipped into the mining towns "for the purpose of creating a condition of terrorism amongst the people." He has secured hundreds of affidavits relating to these alleged atrocities for submission to the Senate, if an investigation is decided upon.

The operators answer that they have been compelled to employ coal and iron policemen and to call for the services of deputy sheriffs and state police to protect their non-union workers from violence and abuse at the hands of the strikers. They have a long list of crimes that they lay at the door of the strikers, whom they accuse of assaulting strike-breakers, burning and bombing their homes and destroying the coal companies' property.

"I earnestly desire a senatorial investigation," said President Baker, of Pittsburgh Terminal Coal, "for the opportunity it will afford to direct attention to the dastardly acts of which our inoffensive workmen have been the victims. Scarcely a day passes that our chief of police does not submit reports of these crimes."

The United Mine Workers assert, however, and say they have affidavits to prove it, that many of the crimes of which their members are accused have actually been committed by coal and iron police for the purpose of bringing the strikers into disrepute.

FEW CONVICTIONS

Each party charges that the justices of the peace in the mining towns have been subsidized by or are friendly to, the other side. Thousands of arrests have been made for disorders attending the strike, but there have been few convictions in the higher courts. Each crowd charges that the politicians are favoring the other side, and offers much specific evidence in support of the contention.

The union miners, in their bill of complaint, lay emphasis on injunctions that various courts have issued against their activities, especially that of Judge Langham, of Indiana county, which prohibits the distribution of relief to the strikers by the United Mine Workers, forbids the singing of hymns in the lot of the Magyar Presbyterian Church, stops billboard advertising that a strike is on, prohibits picketing, prevents any individual from doing anything that would in any way call public attention to the fact that there is a strike in the mines of the Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation, and contains other drastic prohibitions.

FANNIE HURST AND HER HUSBAND, JACQUES S. DANIELSON

The injunction against singing hymns in the lot of the Magyar Presbyterian Church has excited widespread comment. The operators admit that from their standpoint this was a strategic blunder, calculated to place them before the public in an unfavorable light; but they explain that under the pretext of singing hymns in the lot the strikers were really creating an uproar to disturb a strike-breaker whose home is nearby.

One of the spectacular features of the strike, and the cause of a vast amount of suffering, has been the eviction of the strikers' families from the coal companies' houses and the selling of their furniture for non-payment of rent. Murray says that in the last three months there have been approximately 12,000 evictions in Pennsylvania—8,000 in Western and 4,000 in Central Pennsylvania.

RIVAL FACTIONS ACCUSE FOES OF FOSTERING "REIGN OF TERROR"

The companies in many cases have no other tenants for the vacated houses and have boarded them up. Indignation has been expressed at the unnecessary ousting of poor women and children from their homes in the dead of winter. The United Mine Workers in the past few months have erected, or have in course of construction, rough barracks, containing 4,764 rooms, to house 1,536 families.

LEGAL CLAIM

The operators assert that the union's own attorneys informed it last summer that there was no possible legal course by which the evictions could be prevented. Ample notice to vacate was given, ample time to build barracks, but—so the operators charge—the union deliberately declined to act, it deliberately "manipulated" evictions in the dead of winter, at Christmas time, as a grandstand play for public sympathy. Furthermore, the operators say, they have actually put out of their houses only a few families, who courted it in the desire to appear before the public as martyrs. Most of the evicted families, according to the coal companies, voluntarily quitted their houses on legal notice to vacate.

"I am sorry for the women and children," said a prominent mine operator, "I have contributed to their relief and have told my wife and mother to contribute. But the guilt for their suffering is the union's. Their members' plight is of their own choosing."

EARNINGS TOLD

Murray says that under the Jacksonville scale $7.50 a day was the maximum paid for skilled labor inside the mine, that the average number of working days was 160 a year, and the gross annual income of a miner receiving $7.50 was about $1,200, from which he had to deduct $150 a year for the purchase of powder, tools and other supplies, leaving him only $1,050 on which to feed, clothe, house and educate his family. The operators answer that $7.50 was the basis or minimum rate, that the average number of working days was more nearly 200 than 160, and that there were many instances of miners drawing as much as $900 a month, or $10,800 a year, while the mine superintendent was receiving only $3,500.

"Any good pick miner who didn't make $300 a month had something the matter with him," said an operator, "and some machine cutters are making $400 a month now on the reduced scale. Income tax returns will prove this, and our vouchers will also bear it out."

The operators dispute that a miner has to pay $150 for tools and supplies. They call attention on the other hand to the deductions taken from his pay under the "checkoff" system, by which the employers were required to withhold his dues for membership in the United Mine Workers and turn them over to the union.

"TOO MUCH COAL"

The union officials and the coal companies are in agreement that over-production is the curse of the industry and the cause of most of its ills. There are too many mines, too many miners. The consumptive coal requirements of the country are given as approximately 483,000,000 tons a year, with an additional 26,000,000 tons required for export trade, making a total of 509,000,000 tons, while the potential producing capacity exceeds 850,000,000 tons annually. This makes for intermittency of employment and severe competition.

Owing, according to the union officials, to "complete lack of organization on the part of the operators," coal is produced under cut-throat competitive conditions, and the miners are striking not for the Jacksonville agreement alone, but "for the setting up of stabilizing agencies within the industry that will tend to correct its defects."

The operators answer that even if it were practically possible for them to get together and agree to maintain prices they would render themselves liable to prosecution under the Sherman anti-trust law. One of them said his company would be very happy to pay the Jacksonville scale if it could be assured of $3.50 a ton for its coal.

The conservative right wing of the United Mine Workers is in favor of getting rid of the surplus miners by finding places for them in other industries. The radical left wing, whose spokesman in Pittsburgh is Anthony Minerich, chairman of the Pennsylvania-Ohio miners' relief committee, advocates nationalization of the mines, and the establishment of a six-hour day and five-day week, which, they say, would furnish work for all.

LOSSES HEAVY

The operators say they are through with the United Mine Workers for all time—that so far as they are concerned the strike does not exist.

The union charges that the coal companies, at the instigation of railroads and bankers, have engaged in a conspiracy to destroy the union. This is vehemently denied by the operators.

The United Mine Workers' organization is the backbone of the American Federation of Labor, and there is a strong feeling in union labor circles that if the miners are crushed the entire intricate structure of organized labor in this country will collapse. Hence unions of every sort in all parts of the country are contributing to the support of the miners and bidding them hold out.

The coal companies have suffered enormous losses since the inception of the strike. The Pittsburgh Coal Company has paid no dividends on its preferred stock, always previously a regular dividend payer, since 1925. Wages of its non-union workers have been cut three times, most recently on January 16, 1928. The strikers point to these deficits, contrast them with the earnings when the Jacksonville scale was in effect and the mines were unionized, and say they prove the futility of the companies' present policy.

The operators answer that they exhausted their surplus earnings paying the Jacksonville rate, and that their present losses are due to discriminatory railroad rates which deprived them of the profitable Great Lakes trade, and to other factors not connected with the strike.

The non-union miners at present employed are to a large extent Negroes.

TASK ENTHUSES MISS HURST

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY.

Fanny Hurst came to Pittsburgh this morning with the enthusiasm of a cub reporter about to embark upon the adventure of a first story. And she came with "a clean sheet—perfectly blank."

That is what the great novelist said when asked if she had any plans during her stay here under the auspices of The Sun-Telegraph. She smiled broadly:

"I know so very little about the miners' situation that I feel I am starting out with a clean sheet, and I have no idea what I am going to write. Shouldn't that help me to write fairly and look into the situation altogether impartially?"

Radiant, charming and like a very young girl in her happiness at a holiday away from the hum and excitement of New York, Miss Hurst admitted frankly:

"I have had positively no newspaper experience and I'm going to feel just like a reporter. I really was so busy I didn't see how I was going to get away, but when the invitation came from The Sun-Telegraph I couldn't turn it down. It seems to me this is a great opportunity for a study of this question. Is it true that conditions are really so dreadful?"

Miss Hurst, who is really Mrs. Danielson, and a very busy Mrs. as well as Miss, brought her handsome husband with her. He, too, is enthusiastic over the adventure into the mining camps and, like a man, began trying to find out right away what could be done legislatively to help matters.

Just what the celebrated fiction [illegible] who is one of our most be- [illegible] portrayers of human emotions, [illegible]nd in her stay in Pittsburgh is a question. But there is no doubt she will get just a little nearer the heart of the situation than any other writer has, so far.

For one of her first questions was:

"You people are going to take me into these homes, aren't you? I feel I can get farther by being right with the wives and children themselves than any other way. Let me live right with them, then I will learn the truth."

Miss Hurst even suggested eating at the miners' table of the same lowly fare, and objected strenuously to the idea that fruit and sandwiches should be packed and taken along on her trips.

"If they can eat it—so can I," she replied quite firmly, I am no better than they. Just more fortunate."

With that attitude and her genius for painting pictures of life as it really is, Miss Hurst's stories should be masterpieces. She will tell us of conditions in such a way that we can close our eyes and go with her on these vivid excursions, much as we have gone with her on others while reading her books and make-believe stories.

And this should be just a little more real, for it will be life.

added for the elections bureau. The money will be used in case a special board to recount votes is ordered by court. Last year a special recount board in charge of Attorney Ward Bonsall was ordered to make an official recount after the general election. Should no board be ordered, the commissioners explained, the money will be returned to the general county fund.

Rents for polling places this year were estimated at $40,000. The Board of Public Education has billed the county for $14,000 as rent for 175 school buildings used for election purposes the last two years. Payment has been withheld pending receipt of an opinion from the county solicitor as to the county's liability. The commissioners refused $1,000 asked by the election bureau for possible special elections.

Another item held up was $12,450 for materials, repairs and equipment to polling places. Justus Schroedel, superintendent of county buildings, was directed to appear today with a detailed explanation for the request.

Air Flivver Hops for Miami

DETROIT, Jan. 24.—(AP.) Harry Brooks, piloting the latest Ford product—a flivver plane—took off from the Ford airport at 7:15 o'clock, eastern standard time, today on a projected non-stop flight to Miami, Fla.

In total darkness and with a steady fall of rain and snow, the tiny plane was brought from the hangar. With no ceremony, Brooks took his place in the plane, shook hands with Henry Ford and William B. Mayo, chief engineer of the Ford Motor Company, and was off. He circled the field once, gained altitude of about 500 feet and swung away from the field on the southward journey.

"I wish you luck," were Ford's only words.

The flivver plane, first of all-Ford manufacture to be produced, is so tiny it could easily be hangared in a woodshed.

With a wing spread of less than 20 feet, and a gasoline capacity of approximately 48 gallons, the plane is believed by its designers capable of negotiating the 1,400-mile journey on half of its gas load. Tests of the ship have showed a gasoline consumption of only a fraction more than two gallons per 100 miles, while traveling at top speed, which is approximately 100 miles an hour.

The plane is powered by a tiny two-cylinder motor. Its production marks the initial venture of Ford into the manufacture of airplane motors.

MISS HURST HERE, FIRST STORY SOON

as one of my most important works and I understand the service this newspaper is undertaking to give its readers and the public."

Miss Hurst addressed Mrs. Carl E. Coslowsky, president of the Congress of Women's Clubs, who greeted her in behalf of all Western Pennsylvania clubwomen. With Mrs. Coslowsky were Mrs. W. C. McClure, chairman of the program committee, and Mrs. Charles A. Brooks, chairman of the social committee of the congress. They invited Miss Hurst to be honor guest at a dinner by the congress Friday night.

The distinguished author is accompanied by her husband, Jacques S. Danielson, and they are stopping at the Hotel Schenley.

It is always pointed out that the name of Fannie Hurst became well known in the literary world soon after she completed her post-graduate work at Columbia University when she still was a very young woman and after her marriage she continued to use her maiden name in all her professional work. Mr. and Mrs. Danielson, however, are a devoted couple, are interested in the same affairs and enjoy the same recreations.

A trip through the northern part of the county was taken immediately upon her arrival here and she expected to spend the day making the rounds of the mining districts. With characteristic energy she will return to the hotel and commence writing. Her work will be incessant, she declares, and she seeks no recreation, and social engagements are taboo when she has important writing at hand.

"All my thoughts, my whole being, are centered in this work," she said. "It has gripped my soul and I pray for strength and heavenly guidance in its accomplishment."

POSTERS AID HUNT

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The pretty features of 18-year-old Frances S. John Smith, who disappeared from Smith College, Norhampton, Mass., 12 days ago, were imprinted in the mind of each member of the New York police department today.

One thousand circulars containing full face and profile pictures of the missing heiress were posted in police stations for the members of the force to study. The posters offered a $10,000 reward for the return of the girl alive to her parents, another $1,000 has been added to this reward by the father of Alice Corbett of Utica, N. Y., who disappeared from Smith College two years ago and was never found.

A reward of $1,000 is offered for the return of Miss Smith's body.

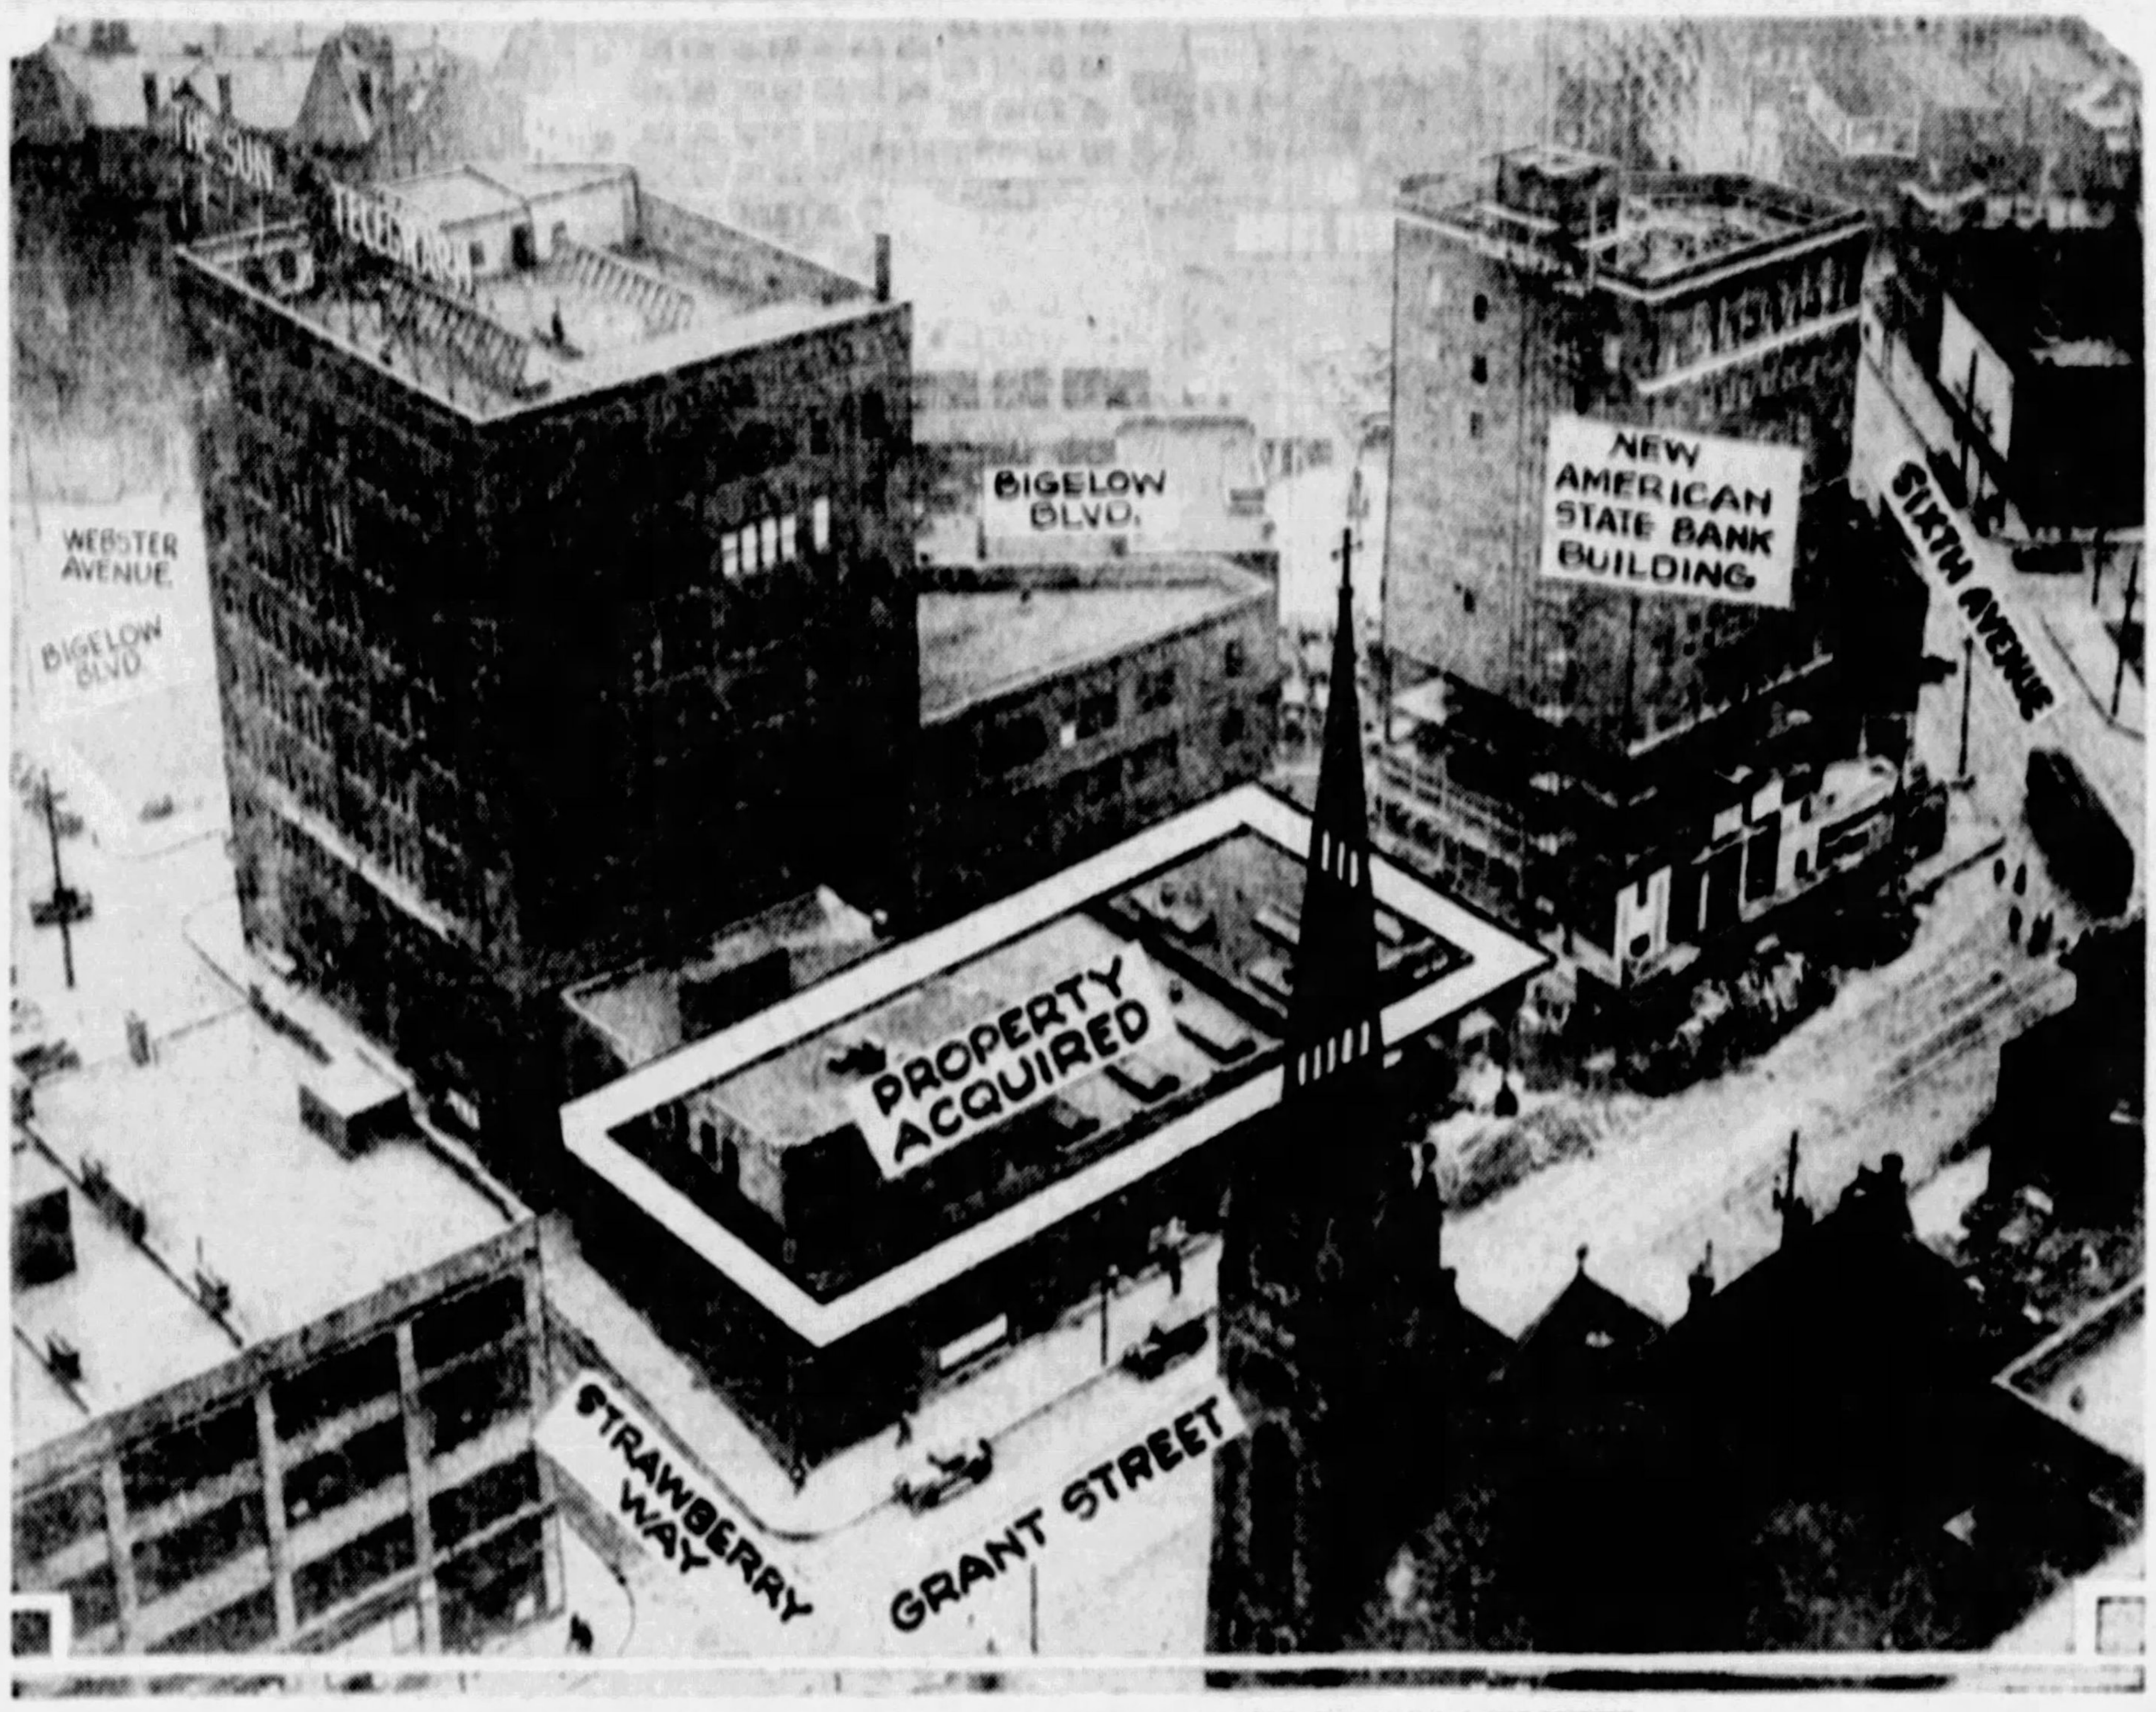
SUN-TELEGRAPH BUYS -:- NEW BUILDING SITE



GROWING CIRCULATION DEMANDS LARGER PRESS FACILITIES

Forced by a growing circulation's demand for large press facilities the Sun-Telegraph has acquired property with a Grant street frontage of 180 feet and 60 feet deep, directly to the rear of the building where the paper now publishes, it was announced today. Construction is expected to start within a year. L. W. Monteverde, vice president and sales manager of the Real Estate Company of Pittsburgh handled the deal.

'FOX' MOCKS FATE ON EVE OF TRIAL

TRIES GRIM PUZZLE IN CELL

By LEWIS S. YOUNG,
International News Service Special Correspondent.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 24.—A whimsical, half-mocking smile on his lips, William Edward Hickman, confessed kidnaper and slayer of little Marian Parker, sat in his cell today and played with a crossword puzzle entitled "Death on the Gallows."

Within 24 hours he will go on trial for the crime which has shocked the nation.

The crossword puzzle was sent to "The Fox" by an anonymous writer who apparently wished to tease Hickman.

"Because of your predicament and because of the possible unhappy fate which faces you, I have conceived a crossword puzzle, 'Death on the Gallows,' which I have enclosed," the sender wrote.

And Hickman, with a sneer, accepted the challenge and is attempting to solve the puzzle.

"The world's first kidnaper" was the description given in the puzzle for the word to fit a horizontal row of squares.

"Slang word for San Quentin" was another.

Others were:

"The lower end of a rope."

"A strong cord used frequently in penitentiaries."

The "Fox" himself says the puzzle of "Death on the gallows" fails to strike terror to his heart.

But he's like that. Whether he fears death on the gallows or not, he appears as far from remorse and fair in his daily demeanor as he did the first day he entered the jail.

FREQUENT VISITOR

EDNA FRIEDEL

Edna Friedel, of 510 Foreland street, is consistent, it seems. She was in Morals Court today for the third time in eight days and fined $50 for "borrowing" an $18 check and $37 in stamps from J. S. Anderson. Edna's previous visits brought fines for keeping a disorderly house and toting a revolver into the peaceful City-County Building.

will start on the new building, but it is believed that construction will begin within a year.

L. W. Monteverde, vice president and sales manager of the Real Estate Company of Pittsburgh, is the broker who handled the transaction.

The new Sun-Telegraph Building will be one more in a series of Grant street developments announced since its widening, developments which will place it to the fore among the city's important business thoroughfares.

Prominent among the new Grant street structures will be the $6,500,000 Federal Building, to stand at Seventh avenue and Grant street; the $3,000,000 31-story Koppers Building at Grant street, Seventh avenue and William Penn place; the William Penn Hotel Annex; the 35-story Grant Building, in Grant street, between Third and Fourth avenues, and the American State Bank Building, at the northeast corner of Sixth avenue and Grant street. Other large buildings are in prospect.

The outside portions of the new Sun-Telegraph property—the tract at one end being 40x60 feet and that at the other 35x60 in dimensions—were bought from Mrs. Eleanor M. Kelly, Mrs. Sarah M. Kerr, and the Fidelity Title and Trust Company, as trustee for James A. Murphy and Margaret O. Collins. The inside tract, 115x60 feet, was leased for a long term from Margaret A. Paxton, Amy P. Roberts, Frank E. Roberts, Lewis Seymour Mudge and Anna Bolton Mudge.

Laughlin Heads J. & L.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation today, George M. Laughlin, Jr., vice president, was elected chairman of the board to succeed the late B. F. Jones, Jr.

Mr. Laughlin was born in Pittsburgh, a son of the late Maj. George M. Laughlin, one of the early partners in the business and actively connected with the organization until his death in 1908.

Mr. Laughlin was educated in St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and Yale University. He went into the steel company in 1893 in the operating division, where he continued in executive positions until he became a vice president in 1921. Some years previous to that he had been made a director and member of the executive committee.

LEADS ACTORS' STRIKE

HELEN SHIPMAN

Actors at a Brooklyn theater, led by Helen Shipman and Lorin Raker, who headed the cast, refused to go on the stage last night when backers of "Oh, Johnny!" a musical comedy, could not post a guarantee for their week's salaries. Police were summoned when the announcement was made that the show would not be presented, the management fearing a riot. The audience seemed almost relieved, however, and filed quietly out.

PUPIL'S $350 COAT STOLEN

Resolution to Be Only Flood Aid, Will Thinks

LAFAYETTE, La., Jan. 24.—Just passed through the Lower Mississippi flood district again. First time since last May, Congress has taken up the tariff, farm relief, big navy, Al Smith, Ku Klux Klan, Nicaragua, Cuban independence, Mexican oil, Boulder Dam and Tom Heflin. But nothing has been said about building the dikes higher. They will wait till the night they adjourn and then pass a resolution against another flood.

ARRIVING AT BARRACKS

BENEFIT PLAYERS VISIT MINES

Six fair dancers from the Coral Gables Revue, Guiran and Marguerite stepped out into the mud and mire at Curry to visit the union barracks yesterday to see for themselves how thousands of men, women and children are forced to live in the coal districts of Western Pennsylvania. Ragged children ran to greet the girls, thinking they were bringing food and clothing for which there is dire need in the mining camps. The girls explained they were visiting, but would put forth their best efforts at the benefit show next Thursday night at Sheridan Square Theater. The cabs were donated by the Yellow Cab Company.

MINERS' RELIEF DISTRIBUTION IS CENTRALIZED

OVERLAPPING OF EFFORT TO BE AVOIDED

Centralizing the administration of volunteer relief for destitute families of coal miners in the Pittsburgh district, the Clergymen's Fund for Miners' Relief has been made the official clearing house for all organizations engaged in the work. At headquarters in the old South school building eight experienced social workers under Miss Clara McConnell, of the Associated Charities, will handle investigations and prevent an overlapping of effort.

All individuals and organizations have been asked to report their assistance to the central body.

Forty-two local relief bodies are working through the committee for Allegheny county. It is pointed out that no indiscriminate "charity" is dispensed. No spasmodic "basket relief" is countenanced. The needs of each family are studied and budgeted and relief will be administered as long as required. No money is handled by the families themselves.

The East Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a relief drive which is being carried on throughout this week. It is pointed out that children's clothes for six years upward is mostly needed. Bundles of wearing apparel, it is stated, may be left at the East Pittsburgh postoffice, the municipal building and at business places in the borough. Members of the committee are C. F. Stoner, R. L. [illegible], S. W. Wolfe, Jr., Morris [illegible], J. Sedler.

DARROW HERE, MAY AID HINDU STUDENT

Clarence Darrow, champion of the oppressed, victor in many outstanding criminal trials in the country, may become defender of Meher Singh Rait, young Pittsburgh Hindu student, fighting deportation to his native India.

"Although I am not familiar with this case," Attorney Darrow said on his arrival this morning, "I am in favor of the boy right now. I have no patience with this restriction policy."

Half an hour after Darrow checked in at the Fort Pitt Hotel he was closeted with Singh Rait in conference and the result may be that the noted criminal authority will become identified in a Pittsburgh case.

"As far as the Hickman affair in Los Angeles is concerned," Darrow said emphatically, "I have no more interest in it than most other people. I have not been asked to take part in his defense, and I have no intention of so doing. There is no doubt that Hickman is a victim of dementia precox and was not responsible for his actions, but the American public wants a thrill out of the case and probably will demand the boy's death.

"And that's the trouble with American people," Darrow continued. "People get such a kick out of punishing their fellow men that you couldn't stop crime if you tried. The Snyder-Gray killing was an instance of the public's love of punishment. In spite of our Rotary and Kiwanis clubs and Chambers of Commerce, there is abundant proof that the world is not civilized any more than it was in the Middle Ages. The old lust to kill is strong in the public's heart and it won't be satisfied with less."

Mr. Darrow is in Pittsburgh to address the Young Men and Women's Hebrew Association tonight.

leading all the sixes in distinction and value

Far faster than Hupmobile can build them, the motoring public is demanding record quotas of the Hupmobile Six of the Century. It is worthy of note that the Six of the Century is drawing buyers from every field—from those who planned to spend several hundred dollars less to those accustomed to paying $1,000 more for distinctive appearance and performance.

Stop Indigestion Before It Stops You

Indigestion is dangerous.

That mass of fermented food in the stomach forms gas and creates an acid condition which, by its very nature, only gets worse. Don't neglect it. Ulcers may form.

Two things should be done for indigestion—and at once. The harmful acid should be removed and the inflamed stomach lining protected.

Bi-nesia does both. It instantly neutralizes acid, stops fermentation, sweetens the stomach, prevents gas and forms a healing, protective coating of bismuth over the delicate stomach lining. There's nothing better.

Don't take chances with indigestion. You can remove the actual cause of the trouble and enjoy your meals again with the aid of pure, harmless Bi-nesia. All druggists sell tablets and powder for only 59 cents and guarantee unconditional satisfaction.

Home-made Remedy Stops Cough Quickly

Finest cough medicine you ever used. Family supply easily made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant—children like it, and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, famous for healing the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

NOBODY WANTS PRISONER

Refused admittance to the county home because he is not a citizen and returned from the workhouse because he is too old to work, Ferdinand Bernardo, 69, is a problem on the hands of the Swissvale police who are giving him a temporary home. Bernardo has no home and when Burgess W. T. Pyle recently committed him to the workhouse for 30 days, he was returned because he was too old to work. The poor house would not take him because he was not naturalized.

A son of the aged man, John Bernardo of 2134 Monongahela avenue, told police he tried to provide a boarding place for his father, but the latter refused to agree, asking for money instead. The son said he had given him money on several occasions but the money was spent for whisky. Efforts will be made to settle the matter today.

WEDGED AUTO JAMS CARS

Street car traffic was tied up at 6:55 o'clock this morning when an automobile became wedged between the north and southbound street cars at South Diamond and Federal streets. The jam lasted about 15 minutes.

The auto of Bernard P. Fox, 28, of 2324 Charles street, making a left turn into Federal street from South Diamond street, struck the front of a southbound Brighton road car in charge of Motorman Hiram Zeller. A northbound car was stopped in time to prevent a second crash, but the auto was wedged between the two cars.

Police arrested Fox and his companion, E. Smith, 26, of 232 East Lacock street.

MODERN AIRPORT SOUGHT FOR SCHENLEY PARK

ENGINEERS BOOST OVAL SITE

Schenley Oval and land adjoining it in Schenley Park can be made into a practical landing field with runways of 2,000 and 2,400 feet, according to reports of engineers who have surveyed the site. Representatives of the aeronautics division of the United States Department of Commerce have inspected the proposed aviation depot site and pronounced it practical, it is said.

A flying field in the park would not take the place of the large municipal airport of 200 acres that is being sought by committees of several civic organizations, but it would provide a landing field close to the business district of the city. Making the oval into an aviation field would not in any way violate the terms of the grant of Mary E. Schenley, a number of local attorneys say.

A field in Schenley Park would comprise 44 acres, two more than are in Rodgers Field, the municipal airport near Aspinwall. It is but 10 minutes' drive from downtown and is located on a plateau above the smoke and fog. It would be in the center of the open park and it is close to bus lines and street cars. The site already is owned by the city and the only cost would be in necessary improvements.

U. S. APPROVES PROJECT

George T. Pettay, a local engineer, has just completed a survey of the site and made plans for the proposed field. Walter U. Snyder, Jr., airway extension superintendent of the United States Department of Commerce visited Pittsburgh December 21, and inspected the plans, making a favorable report on the proposed project, it is said. The total cost to put the field in shape would be approximately $700,000, according to Engineer Pettay's report.

This cost would include the grading and for the installation of boundary lights, flood lights, radio beacons and other means of illumination. City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt is said to have reported that the city would not be violating the grant of Mary E. Schenley, by using the property for a landing field.

The proposed landing field would include the land now bordered by the race track, approximately 1,200 by 500 feet, the tourist camp, approximately 600 by 150 feet, the sloping ground, 900 by 500 feet southwest of the oval, the picnic ground of 1,000 by 600 feet west of the oval and another nearby strip of property. The entire site lies between the View road and the Panther Hollow road.

"MOST ARRESTED MAN" REFORMS

TOM HENRY

Tom Henry, who claims title as the most-arrested man in America, is now sitting on the driver's seat of the water wagon. The reason for his reformation, he said, was caused by police magistrates refusing him the comfort and food of jail, even though he was completely soused.

CRAVED JAIL FOOD

After a week of complete sobriety, Henry admits he has defeated the Demon Rum and is on the highway to salvation and prepared to lead an army of former "bums" to respectability and self-support. "Desire for good jail food prompted me to drink," Henry said.

CAN'T GET IN, NOW!

"Down with Demon Drink!" cried Tom, who admitted he has drunk enough bum booze to float the Atlantic Fleet. This high resolve came about, he said, because they wouldn't let him in jail any more after he had run his string of arrests up to 450 and workhouse sentences to 175 terms.

TOM TURNS LEAF, CLIMBS "WAGON"

Tom Henry is on the wagon.

That is news.

Tom Henry boasted of his title as "The most arrested man in America."

He now seeks new distinctions, such as "The Greatest Come-back in America."

After years of patient and thoughtful inebriation, with keen striving for the glory of being arrested more times than any other individual, Henry at 57, has tired of wine-bibbing, patrol-riding and sojourning in jail, and seeks the straight and narrow trail of complete sobriety.

During his 30 years of dallying with the flowing bowl, Henry admitted running his string of consecutive arrests up to 450 in Allegheny county and 175 terms in the workhouse. He also admits eating a lot of food at the county's expense. In fact, it was desire for food that often prompted Henry to deliberately lift the liquor to the lip.

Henry has been out of jail for a whole week now, quite a record, he thinks.

But let him tell his own story about the great determination to do differently:

"To keep out of jail: Keep on the water wagon, being advice to men who drink and expect the jail to sober them, by Tom Henry, champion jail 'Gate Crasher' and most-arrested man in America.

"Since Warden John McNeill of the Allegheny County Jail complained that the expense of housing and feeding the unfortunate men, commonly called 'bums,' was becoming excessive and police magistrates commenced to help him out by refusing summary convictions to veterans like myself, I find that this action is a great boon to me.

"I am now on the 'water wagon' and am attending church and feeling in the best of health. When out of work and broke I used to drink in order to get arrested and placed in jail.

"After 450 brief jail sentences, I found recently that police magistrates would not send me to a nice warm jail but turned me out in the cold.

"Finding the necessity of drinking removed, I quit drinking and now am earning a living and expect to get a permanent job as soon as I have convinced people I am in earnest.

"The thing that reformers do not understand is that when a man is penniless and cannot get food or shelter he can always get drunk, so, in order to get into jail many men get drunk. But if the magistrates refuse to commit these men to jail many of them will have to quit their free drunks and go to work to earn a living.

"Although I have been drunk more times than I can remember, I have never been seriously ill or had delirium tremens or committed any crime or breach of any law except the prohibition laws. The reason why I am now able to reform is that when I have money, food has the preference and I will go without liquor rather than drink on an empty stomach.

"It is the 'eye-opener' in the morning, the first drink of the day, that makes the drunkard, but now, thanks to the warden and magistrates stopping my trips to jail, I am a tee-totaler and am going to remain that way and try to save others."

DEFENSE LOSES "TRIAL WITHIN A TRIAL"

A "trial within a trial" ended in Common Pleas Court today. Visiting Judge J. Frank Graff directed the jury to return a verdict for the Commonwealth against the plea of counsel for Harry Fank and Meyer Letwin, charged with arson in the firing of an East Ohio street shop and a Pressley street rooming house.

Defense counsel had asked for an acquittal on the ground that the jury which heard the evidence against the defendants had been discharged Sunday, December 18, after disagreement, without a sitting judge or court clerk present. This plea was then considered in open court before a new jury.

The defense plea refused, the new trial, on the original charges, was begun immediately.

Today's trial had many unusual features. Two judges, a court crier, two tipstaves and defense counsel all testified before three sitting judges.

President Judge James B. Macfarlane testified that when Crier James Steel telephoned him of the jury's disagreement he instructed Steele to discharge the jury.

District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner made the motion on which the court ordered the directed verdict. The defense was represented by Attorneys William H. Coleman and Lottie Little.

Picture Brings Daughter to Mother's Aid

"That looks like mother," was the expression of Mrs. John A. Killmyer, of 1206 Madison avenue, last night as she glanced at the picture of a kindly-faced old lady published yesterday in the Sun-Telegraph.

And as Mrs. Killmyer read the underlines of the picture she learned that 15 hours before her mother, Mrs. Caroline Weschler, 76, of 1019 Goehring street, had had the thrilling experience of being rescued by firemen from her burning home.

Mrs. Killmyer was profuse in her thanks this morning to the Sun-Telegraph for bringing to her home the news which enabled her to be at her mother's bedside last night. Mrs. Weschler still is suffering from shock. Mrs. Killmyer and her mother live only a few blocks apart.

Over 6,000 bottles sold in one small New Jersey town in one year—and the best druggists the country over concede that its phenomenal sales are due to the fact that the most stubborn chronic cases are promptly conquered. Easily Trained to Perfect Regularity!

It's so easy to have regular, thorough, and natural elimination of all waste—daily! A little calcium — and Nature does the rest. Don't take harsh habit-forming cathartics. Nor sickening salts. A tiny calcium wafer now and then avoids all need of them. Calcium cleanses the blood, too, and clears the complexion like no lotion could ever do. Pure calcium keeps you in the pink of condition.

Try it!

A five-day test will prove to you very conclusively the system's need for calcium, and the decided benefit from these little wafers. Your druggist has them—the test size for pocket is 10c. Or the family size, 60c.

GROCERY FIRM DISSOLVED

A petition has been filed in Common Pleas Court before Judge James B. Drew asking for dissolution of the S. B. Charters Grocery Corporation, Third avenue and Grant street, one of the oldest retail groceries in the city.

The business was founded 46 years ago by S. B. Charters, and was incorporated in 1911. At one time, the concern operated 38 chain stores in various sections of the Pittsburgh district, but three years ago all these were disposed of, and the Grant street store alone retained. Last November 1 the stockholders voted to dissolve. S. B. Charters, the founder, is the president of the corporation and signed the petition to dissolve.

Just compare their Progress

Children do learn faster with a Royal Portable Typewriter in the home. If you don't believe it, try it with one child, deny it to another—and compare their progress.

Children think in terms of print rather than script, and putting their ideas into printed letters on a Royal Portable Typewriter is much easier than the labor of long-hand writing. Typing actually permits the child to concentrate upon the idea to be expressed.

Outstanding for beauty of design, finished in your choice of rich black or smart colors, the Royal Portable is the most modern of lightweight writing machines. $60.00 complete with carrying case—many prefer gradual payments. ASKS LIMIT FOR RECKLESS DRIVERS

Request for maximum sentences for reckless motorists and particularly on drunken drivers was made today by Public Safety Director James M. Clark, to Traffic Magistrate John A. Staley, Jr.

The request is due to the alarming increase of automobile fatalities in 1927. According to figures from 76 cities, announced by the Commerce Department at Washington, Pittsburgh, last year, led the larger cities in the increase of deaths due to automobiles. In 1926, according to the report, 161 fatalities occurred. Last year there were 214 or an increase of 31 per cent. The average increase for the 76 cities was 5 per cent, several showing reductions.

According to Director Clark's figures 174 persons were killed here last year by machines, compared with 144 in 1926 or an increase of about 21 per cent.

"Regardless of figures, the fatalities are much too numerous and something must be done to eliminate accidents," the director said. "Of those killed in 1926, 41 were children under 15 years of age. Last year 39 of the 174 killed were children of the same age. These figures are encouraging because they show that the traffic education campaign conducted last year in schools has been fruitful," the director said.

More policemen to enforce automobile laws are needed in the city and more signal beacons should be installed outside the city limits, the director declared. At the present, he said, 25 additional beacon signals are being built for the city.

Education, the director said is an important factor in eliminating automobile facilities.

"Persons who drive machines must be educated to be careful. If we succeed in educating them, there is no doubt that accidents will decrease," he went on. "The worst menace we have today is the drunken driver. He should be exterminated. I have no sympathy for any person who will drive an automobile while intoxicated."

Armed with riot guns, police and detectives dashed to a gasoline filling station at Taylor and Irwin avenues at 9 o'clock this morning when a burglar alarm was sounded. It was a wild goose chase. An employe had been instructed to send in a test call this afternoon and he sounded it this morning.

Flue Dust, Once Waste, Is Now Reclaimed

Pittsburgh river freighters carried a queer cargo last year in the transportation of great quantities of flue dust collected at the steel plants, river men reported. The dust, containing approximately 60 per cent iron, formerly escaped through furnace stacks, but it is now being caught, molded into bricks and recharged into the furnace. About 50,000 tons of this material was shipped down the Monongahela River last year, and in one day one concern shipped 600 tons.

7 Questions About Yeast—Answered for You

In the past year 435 different questions on Yeast were asked in letters to The Fleischmann Company. Seven of them were asked 1000 times each. Here are the correct answers, given by the medical advisers.

Q: What is Yeast? A: It is a plant—as fresh as any vegetable. Each cake contains billions of these tiny, active plants.

Q: How does it work? A: Headaches, skin trouble, indigestion—such ailments usually come from an unhealthy intestine. Yeast softens the intestinal wastes, stimulates the muscles. Elimination becomes more regular, complete.

Q: What are the scientific facts behind Yeast for Health? A: In the past 30 years Yeast as a food for health has been the subject of research by 140 leading scientists and medical men. The foremost medical journals have published their findings. The value of Yeast as a therapeutic agent is now firmly established.

Q: Will Yeast make me fat? A: No. Any gain in weight will come from the other food you eat—not the Yeast. One Yeast cake contains fewer calories than a soda cracker.

Q: Does it cause gas? A: Yeast should not cause gas if eaten as directed. Where gas has formed it is usually because Yeast has been eaten at mealtime. For best results it should be eaten half an hour before meals, or between meals, and at bedtime. In this way, it increases the flow of gastric juice and so generally relieves the condition that causes gas.

Q: How long should I eat it? A: That depends on your condition. Most cases are helped in 3 or 4 weeks, but to give Yeast a fair trial you should eat it at least 60 days. Because it is a food, and not a medicine, it should of course be eaten regularly.

Q: How should it be eaten? A: Plain, or in hot or cold water or any other way you like. Eat 3 cakes daily, one before each meal or between meals. For stubborn constipation physicians say to drink it in hot water before each meal and at bedtime.

Los Angeles, Calif.

"SURGEONS' assistants must be snappy, wide-awake, skilled nurses. After assisting a well-known surgeon for some time I began to realize that the strain and irregular hours of emergency operating were taking their toll. I lost my 'pep,' felt constantly tired. I suffered from headaches, occasional nausea and stubborn constipation.

"I tried everything—unsuccessfully. One day a young intern laughingly said, 'Try Yeast.' The surgeon scoffed. A wizard with the knife, he concerned himself little with ailments of my type.

"But the seed was sown. At home I read of benefits others had derived from Fleischmann's Yeast. I began that night. Three cakes daily for five weeks brought me back to normal. The surgeon was astonished. 'Sold' on my case, he has interested his colleagues. Today a dozen of the staff at the hospital are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast in many cases like mine."

"MY FAMILY PHYSICIAN suggested Fleischmann's Yeast for the chronic case of boils with which I was afflicted. This was after remedies of every description had failed to give any permanent relief.

"I was most afflicted during the winter and spring months. I began eating Yeast in the winter—3 cakes a day. After only a few weeks I noticed that the boils were beginning to heal . . . I kept right on until finally they all disappeared for good. I still eat Fleischmann's Yeast as it keeps me in the best of health."

"I HAVE BEEN in the jewelry and watch repairing business for a number of years. The work is confining, the hours are long and there is very little chance for taking exercise.

"It is fascinating, though—I need only seat myself at my workbench, hunched over one of the many delicate jobs on hand, and I am lost to the outside world for hours.

"But when I relax again after the long physical and mental tenseness I am often almost numb, and very frequently leave work with a terrific headache that stays with me for the rest of the day . . . Finally I began to be troubled with indigestion, too.

"An acquaintance induced me, after much persuasion, to try eating Fleischmann's Yeast. After two months—eating three cakes every day—my physical condition improved tremendously, and I was no longer bothered with indigestion.

"I eat my Fleischmann's Yeast regularly now and can heartily recommend it to anyone who does not get enough exercise. It is a wonderful tonic—keeps one in fine shape."

"I WAS VERY AMBITIOUS—I hoped to make a successful business career. After working in an office all day—and strenuous work it was!—I would go to school in the evening. But after several years my health gave way. I began to be troubled right along with indigestion. I finally had to give up entirely the idea of a business career. My fiancé told me how Fleischmann's Yeast had helped a friend of his, so I began eating it myself.

"Well, I began to feel much better—and in no time at all, too, it seemed. My stomach trouble vanished entirely. How happy I was to be well again!

"I didn't go back to business, however. I got married instead!"

CONDITIONS AT FT. JAY SHOCK VISITORS

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—Housing conditions of soldiers stationed on Governors Island were found to be even worse than at Fort Hamilton by the committee of citizens, organized by the New York American, to investigate army housing at military posts in the metropolitan area. In a heavy downpour of rain members of the committee visited Fort Jay and were shocked by the conditions revealed at that post.

The committee found the enlisted men quartered in war time warehouse sheds that have been converted into barracks. The outside walls consist of rusty sheet iron backed on the inside by box board and burlap to keep the cold and rain out. Oiffcers told the committee these structures were "porous." No one needed to be told to be convinced of the truth of this.

In many of the barracks the rain seeped through the walls and ceilings of the dismal structures and in several squad rooms pools of water formed on the floor from leaking roofs. The committee found the heating equipment totally inadequate and wasteful. It consisted of one or two antiquated sheet iron stoves in squad rooms housing from 25 to 50 soldiers.

The squad rooms, mess rooms, kitchens and even the makeshift recreation halls were damp, dark, dismal, cold and tragically depressing. The enlisted men huddled in shivering groups around the stoves. The facial expression of most of the soldiers grimly reflected the mental effort of their dismally depressing environment.

The army structures on Governors Island range in age from 25 to 116 years old. The old "Quadrangle" barracks building, an ancient brick structure, cut up into makeshift apartments and used for officers' quarters, is commonly reported among the officers to have been condemned over 10 years ago as living quarters for soldiers. The report could not be verified at the post. An old coach house, the committee found, had been converted into living quarters for junior officers.

The worst conditions were found in the war-time constructed shacks and converted warehouses used for housing the enlisted men and the non-commissioned officers, entitled to separate quarters, and the latter's families. They were dark, cold and damp. In many places the roofs leaked. From the rain-soaked roofs the rain ran in rivers and water collected in deep pools on the sagging, rotting porches.

In one non-commissioner officer's house it was so damp and cold that the sergeant's wife, a "war bride" from France, was shivering even while hard at work at her sewing machine. She said:

"If I have to live like this I shall soon die."

Fort Jay has a strength of approximately 1,200 men. Of these about 900 belong to the Sixteenth Infantdy, under the command of Col. Croft. There are also stationed on the island a motor transport company, a quartermaster's detachment, an ordnance, medical, signal and other detachments and a number of casuals. The records of the post show a housing capacity of quarters for 130 officers, 40 warrant officers, 42 non-commissioned officers, 1,328 entlisted men and 25 animals.

In addition to disgracefully inadequate housing for sololiers the committee found an example of wastefulness on Governors Island in the storing of 6,000 tons of coal in the open air with a consequent heavy deterioration in fuel value.

(Tomorrow's article deals with conditions at Fort Wadsworth.)

CUT OFF WITH $5, SON ATTACKS MOTHER'S WILL

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Jan. 24.—Left only $5 in his mother's will disposing of an estate valued at $100,000, George B. Brinton today filed a petition in the prothonotary's office asking that the probation of the will be revoked on grounds that undue influence had been used at the time it was made, and also that his mother, the late Mrs. Anna C. Brinton, was not in fit mental condition to make a will. Judge James A. Chambers awarded citations upon all parties interested.

RAILWAYS CO. ASKS NEW DE FORD TRIAL

The Pittsburgh Railways Company, by W. A. Challener, its attorney, filed a motion for a new trial in the case of E. Bertha De-Ford, who last week secured a verdict against the defendant company for $19,500. The woman alleged that she was injured on a street car at Fifth avenue and Market street. Attorney R. P. Marshall represented the plaintiff in the suit.

NO FREE TICKETS, THURSTON MAGIC

No "Annie Oakleys"—not even to Pittsburgh's nine councilmen.

"Annie Oakleys"—as the initiated know—are free passes to theatrical performances.

Howard Thurston, magician extraordinary, appeared before Council yesterday to invite the members to the benefit matinee he will give in the Pitt Theater Friday afternoon for the destitute women and children in the mining camps of the Pittsburgh district.

"Every single dollar received will go to their relief," Thurston told the city's legislators. "We hope to take in at least $2,000. I want you all to come. Bring $1.50 with you to buy your ticket."

"We'll be there," remarked Councilman John S. Herron, "but, as we are here merely as representatives of all the citizens of Pittsburgh, I think you should give us a free sample to enable us to recommend the show."

Mr. Thurston obliged, explaining that he would do one trick that required the presence of a middle-aged man, a vigorous man, who is interested in civic affairs, who is active in the Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club, who advocates such things as daylight saving, who is a church member and who never has kissed anyone outside of his own family.

"Is such a man present?" he asked.

"The only man in the world who answers that description is Bob Garland," said President of Council James F. Malone.

Councilman Garland was asked to step forward. He counted nine cards from a deck, held them tightly and then discovered that although he heads the Finance Committee, which deals in millions, he was holding 14 cards. Then Thurston pulled from Garland's coat a pair of baby's shoes, silk stockings and silk bloomers.

"Stop," ordered Malone. "I don't think you should pursue this investigation further."

"How about you?" asked the magician, turning to Malone.

"No, indeed."

"I think you should let me investigate you, as you are the president of this body," insisted the magician.

Malone, reluctantly, stepped forward. Thurston produced from his hip pocket a half pint bottle—filled. As Malone does not drink, this created consternation.

"What are you going to do with the lingerie?" Garland was asked.

"I'm taking it home to my wife before you fellows get this into the papers," he said.

"How about the half pint?" Malone was asked.

"It must have been good," he said, "Thurston took it away with him."

THURSTON MYSTIFIES IN PITT SECOND WEEK

Thurston, the magic man who entertains and befuddles his patrons at the same time, opened the second week of his engagement in the Pitt last night. This entertainer is one noted amusement figure who never reads anything but praise about his performance. No reviewer ever hints that he should cut out some line of his dialogue or that he delete this or that from his performance. Old and young find it equally enjoyable and free from anything that would cause annoyance. That's the way last night's audience found to be his mystifying card tricks, his causing of objects to vanish and reappear and his more elaborate illusions.

DONORA, Pa., Jan. 24. — The Donora Chamber of Commerce is offering prizes for the best euphonious slogans which sing the praises of a certain town.

Additional Stage and Screen News

"The Love Mart" On Screen of Grand

"The Love Mart," shown on the screen of the Grand, is a picture the theme of which is somewhat of a reminder of the old Bartley Campbell melodrama, "The White Slave," Billy Dove appearing as the belle of New Orleans, who, by a turn of fate, later is sold in the slave mart as an octoroon girl, after which another turn of fortune's wheel reveals her as a white girl. Gilbert Roland appears as a barber and fencing master who is instrumental in restoring the girl to her true status after having purchased her and giving her liberty. Noah Beery is a slave trader whose villainy brings him to just retribution. It is all presented in the romantic atmosphere of old New Orleans. On the stage Bernice and Pansy, two melody maids, play various instruments and Gould and Benard sing, dance and make merry in a way that pleases. There also is an Our Gang comedy, "Baby Brother," violin solo by Elias Breeskin, "Topics of the Day" and news pictures in addition to an orchestral overture.

Bowery Frolic Staged In Academy

"Bowery Burlesquers," this week's attraction in the Academy offers comedy intermixed with bits of drama and vaudeville specialties. Morris Perry is much in evidence with his buffoonery. Tim Benson, Jim Hall and Hal Malvey are featured in a comedy skit, "The Stick-up Man." Hattie Beall, is on hand with her comedy and in "The Executioner of Paris," a serious sketch, she appears in a dramatic role. Rheba Augustine and Hal Malvey are a dancing team. Anna Trotman sings and does a neat dancing specialty. Zara, an Oriental specialist, is seen in a series of dances. The show is presented in 12 scenes.

FIDDLERS' CONTEST IN MT. PLEASANT

MT. PLEASANT, Pa., Jan. 24.—Old-time fiddlers, banjo pickers and guitar players, along with mouth organ and jews' harp artists, will vie for prizes in contests to be held Friday night in the armory here. Following the contests will be a monster square dance.

ROCK ENDANGERS BIGELOW BOULEVARD

WANTS CITY TO SPEND $10,000 FOR SAFETY

An emergency fund of $10,000 is asked by Director Lang to remove the rock hazard. Water seeping through the rocks has frozen and with warmer weather these cracks will widen, loosening tons of earth and stone. Police have been ordered to keep a sharp lookout for signs of the rock faling to the boulevard. If a slide were to occur during the evening rush hour, scores of persons would be imperiled and considerable confusion would result to traffic, it is pointed out.

SPRING THAW POTENTIAL THREAT
Tons of overhanging rock threaten to topple onto Bigelow between Kirkpatrick street and the Seventeenth street incline, Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang told Council yesterday. When the frozen ground begins to thaw out, the director said, these rocks will become an acute menace to motor traffic.

"OLD SAN FRANCISCO" PICTURE IN OLYMPIC

"Old San Francisco," a noted melodrama of that city in the days before the "Great Fire," is the current photoplay in the Olympic. The picture is offered with a Vitaphone accompaniment. The story has to do with a Spanish heiress, who is captured and put up for sale in Chinatown. Dolores Costello is the star. The cast includes Warner Oland, John Miljan and Josef Swickard. Vitaphone features are the Henry Halstead Orchestra, Betty Patrick, soloist, and Joseph Diskay, Hungarian tenor.

IS THERE PERFECT FOOT? CITY'S EXPERTS HUNT IT

Is there a perfect foot in Pittsburgh? The Chiropody Society of Pennsylvania is seeking a flawless pedal specimen to present at its convention in the William Penn Hotel on June 3, 4, 5. Entrants will be accepted when the convention opens. They will be accepted from men and women alike, even though there is a strong suspicion that the perfect foot will be found, if at all, with a fair damsel.

RIVER POLLUTION HERE SHOWN COSTLY DANGER

The city of Pittsburgh will be forced to pay $1,000,000 annually if pollution of the Allegheny River is permitted to reach the stage now existing in the Monongahela River, this being the cost of soda ash alone for the Aspinwall filtration plant, C. F. Drake, plant superintendent, said last night at an open meeting of the Pittsburgh Chapter of the Izaak Walton League in rehearsal hall of Carnegie Institute. Most of the contamination is caused by mine water, Mr. Drake said.

POLICEMAN JUST CAN'T HOLD JOB

Clyde Kearns, of Hays, is a bewildered motorcycle policeman these days. Yesterday he was suspended by Burgess W. T. Adams. Last night the Hays police committee reinstated him, and today Burgess Adams again suspended him.

The disagreement involves the propriety of letting a window blind up or down. Kearns testified before the police committee that early Monday the burgess strolled into the hearing room and became indignant because the blinds were lowered. After raising them he struck Kearns, the policeman said, so Kearns promptly chased up to the office of Justice of the Peace Fred Billets and swore out information charging the burgess with disorderly conduct.

After the police committee had reinstated Kearns the burgess promptly revoked its action.

Some persons think politics has something to do with all these maneuvers. When council reorganized that group ousted some appointees who were believed to be the burgess' boosters.

TWO MILLION BUICKS

Buick's Biggest Year—year of the Two Millionth Buick
Three events of major importance cause 1927 to stand out as the biggest of Buick's twenty-four record-breaking years—
Sales leaped to a new high—exceeding Buick's best previous mark—and far surpassing the next highest mark in the Buick field.
Buick for 1928—the Buick of Buicks—swept into view and won the greatest five months' success ever enjoyed by any new Buick.
And then, as a climax, the two-millionth Buick came off the line, bringing Buick production to a point almost double that of any other builder of fine automobiles!
Consider these facts, not merely as records, but in terms of what they mean to you as a motor car buyer.
They mean that the world has chosen Buick! They mean that Buick is the car to buy.

BIG AUTO SHOW ATTRACTIVE TO WOMEN

CARS REFLECT FEMININE DEMAND

Innumerable colors, subdued and harmonized, with modern fashion ideas are combining to make the 1928 automobile show, being staged daily in Motor Square Garden, from 10:30 a. m. to 10:30 p. m., of greatest interest to women.

In this exhibit of 38 lines of motor cars, all boasting displays of several models on two floors of the big show auditorium, are found colors of every hue. Shades to match milady's latest creations from Paris, either in the interior or on the exterior of the motor cars, are the boast of members of the Pittsburgh Automobile Dealers' Association, under whose auspices the show is being staged.

An inspection of the exhibits in the various booths reveals that the feminine demand for more attractive automobiles has resulted in a new type vehicle, one in which hard and cold corners and lines have given way to soft and curving lines. In these new cars the manufacturers boast a product that is one complete unit from bumper to bumperettes, each part having been designed to add beauty to the complete ensemble.

Interiors of the cars show many changes over interiors of cars on display a year ago. Here again the manufacturer has a unified ensemble. Upholstering colors have been made to blend with the exterior painting. More attention has been devoted to panels, hardware and personal accessories. Dash board groupings of instruments have been simplified and the feminine touch extended by new door pockets.

In the accessory division on the sub-floor, the appeal for feminine favor again is noted. Here are shown all those big and little devices that add so much to the pleasures of motoring. Shock absorbers, spring ideas, glass, paint jobs, doors and innumerable other things, including greases and rings, are shown in profusion.

An entertainment program is being provided throughout the show hours by two musical units under the direction of Charles Marsh. Added attractions today will be Olga Mundy, in character and popular song hits; the Wallisch Sisters and Criterion Male Quartet. The musical entertainment is broadcast from the garden through WCAE each afternoon and night.

MOTOR CAR STYLES CAPTIVATE CROWDS

Legions of Pittsburghers, who are daily crowding Motor Square Garden to view all the latest offerings of automobile manufacturers at the annual auto show, have found that there is a style in motor cars. Pretty lines, attractive colors and higher speeds are the talk of the show crowds. The photograph shows one small section of the display which occupies two floors of the Garden.

Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director of the Public Welfare Department, wishes to send Mrs. Isabel Darragh to the Pennsylvania Conference on Social Work, in Scranton, February 6. Public Works Director Edward G. IDENTIFY THIEVES BY NICKED COIN IN LOOT

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—A fifty-cent piece served to identify two robbers as William Drabeck and Edward Razak. Both had held up Louis Qwelose, a cab driver, taking $27.50 in currency and a watch. When police arrested the two as suspects, they were identified by the half-dollar coin, a slightly nicked coin which Qwelose had.

Yes, our prices are inviting. But the quality of our merchandise is even more inviting — a profitable buying combination.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Debs Take Flight to Get Color for Aero Club Ball

TWO debutantes had the thrill of their lives yesterday afternoon when they were taken for their first ride in an airplane, to get a bit of local color for use at the Aero Club ball where they, with seven or eight other girls, will act as cigaret sellers. Just in case you have forgotten, the ball is to be held February 3 in the William Penn Hotel.

The girls, Mary Louise Johnston and Anne King Scott, were just a little dubious about the venture before the plane left the ground, but after Capt. Jack Morris had flown with them from Rodgers Field to the Point and back again, they were a lot more enthusiastic about traveling by air. It was cold, perhaps, but with huge fur-lined coats and boots to ward off the chill, Mary Louise and Anne found zooming about in the blue sky just about the most exciting experience they had ever had.

Clodagh McCune, who is also to be a cigaret vender at the ball, was taken for a flight, too, but she has been in the air before and it was rather an old story to her. These three girls and Jane Foster, another debutante, who declined, however, to get in the plane, were entertained at luncheon in the club before their ride. Jane comes from California, you remember, and she has never had an airplane trip.

The girls' flight yesterday was the sequel to a visit which all of the girls who are to be cigaret sellers made on Friday afternoon to Rodgers Field. But if you will recall how cold and windy it was that day, you will not wonder that the trip was put off until yesterday.

Another early February wedding is being planned. Ellen Stone, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Stephen Stone of Forbes street, is to be the bride at this one, having chose February 8 for the date on which she will be married to Charles Chester Bailey, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bailey of Oakmont. The service is to be read that afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Sixth Presbyterian Church.

Ellen was a very popular debutante last year, you know, and was educated at Miss Porter's School at Farmington. Her fiance is a Cornell man.

And the Taylor Allderdices are in Atlantic City. They are making their headquarters at the Traymore.

AUXILIARY HEARS OF KINDERGARTEN WORK

Miss Ella Ruth Boyce, director of kindergartens in the Pittsburgh public schools, addressed the Woman's Auxiliary to the Allegheny County Medical Society at its meeting in the William Penn Hotel this afternoon. Miss Boyce, speaking on "Pre-School Education," told of the present status of both kindergartens and nursery schools. Mrs. Isaac Davis, pianist, gave Chopin, Schumann and Liszt piano numbers, and Mary Osborn Ludwig, the auxiliary's first junior performer, entertained with two appropriate piano selections. Mrs. Elsie Breese Mitchell, soprano, with Mrs. Henrietta Meyer Bodycombe at the piano, gave several solos, among them "Caro Nome," from "Rigoletto," and there were quartet numbers by Mrs. Herbert E. Woelfel, Mrs. B. Z. Cashman, Mrs. R. J. Behan and Mrs. Carl Scheffler, accompanied by Mrs. Charles H. Henninger. At the tables for the birthday tea, which followed the program, were Mrs. Joseph V. Grabeck and Dr. Luba Robin Goldsmith.

"Intelligence tests are very good; they test many things—anything you want, except that invisible, intangible thing, the human intelligence," said Dr. Andre Morize of Harvard in his talk on "Education" before the Twentieth Century Club yesterday morning. Dr. Morize expressed great admiration for the marvelous machinery provided for American education, for the tremendous achievement in practical and technical education to be found nowhere else in the world, and for the interest in education that is general in America. At the same time he pointed out his objections, as a foreign teacher teaching in America, to certain things in education in this country. He especially stressed the lack of concentration, the emphasis on memory work as against actual knowledge, the distribution of responsibility between parents and teachers and the reconciliation of specialization and culture.

Piano solos by Miss Marie Hinkel and Mrs. J. Lawrence Hunter and songs by Miss Margaret Fingal and Mrs. Adele Eggers Furniss composed the musical portion of yesterday's program at the Literary and Musical Club meeting. The remainder of the program was presented by Miss Laura Cluly, who had a paper on "The Wanderer in Florence—Then and Now." Mrs. J. B. Shaw, whose paper was on "Modern Musicians," and Mrs. C. F. Tiers, who had "Caruso and Duse—An American Contact," as her subject. Mrs. Mary J. Cowley read an interesting letter from Mrs. Walter Ure, a club member, who is in France.

Churches, schools, transportation and historic events were among the several topics touched upon in an interesting outline of local history which was given yesterday in the form of a round table on "Yesterdays in Mt. Lebanon History" before the Mt. Lebanon Woman's Club in the Beach home, Washington road. The group in charge was headed by Mrs. S. A. Schreiner and included Mrs. R. T. Charters, Mrs. J. E. Gilfillan, Mrs. H. B. Long, Mrs. R. L. Kelley, Mrs. Mrytilla Schreiner, Mrs. W. E. McCormick, Mrs. F. W. Cooke, Mrs. A. G. Smith and Miss Nancy McCormick, all of whom have been preparing a history of the township which is later to be published. The entire music department took part in choral singing under the direction of Mrs. Lucille Miller Werner and a quartet in costume, Mrs. J. T. Moon, Mrs. R. M. Barnes, Mrs. I. H. Shaffer and Mrs. R. Holmes, sang "Long, Long Ago." They were accompanied by Mrs. J. P. Boore at the piano and with banjo by Mrs. Van Eshelman. Mrs. B. K. Elliott and Mrs. C. W. Kenney presided at the tea tables.

It would seem that Quotarians are always able to inject some fresh interest into the most routine affairs. Yesterday's luncheon, in the William Penn, for instance, presumably no more than a weekly meeting of the club, had several features to make it outstanding. To begin with, it was the first meeting under the new staff of officers and Miss Anna Egan took her place as president. Then Mrs. Minnie Woods Patterson, of Philadelphia, one of the charter members of the club, was in town and had a word or two to say in greeting, and there were invitations galore. Mrs. Anne Sutter, of the Washington (Pa.) Club, invited the Pittsburgh Quotarians to attend a dinner which was given last night in the George Washington Hotel in honor of Washington's new president, Mrs. Blanche Hallam; Miss Egan was appointed delegate to the Washington (D. C.) inter-cities meeting January 28 and another invitation was read from Wilmington, Del., for an inter-cities meeting March 17. Dr. Clinton Lloyd, dean of the School of Drama and Speech Arts at Duquesne University, gave the program yesterday, reminiscing a bit and giving one or two readings, among them the seven ages speech from "As You Like It." Miss Nell Wilson has accepted the secretaryship of the club, an office that is not elective.

The Woman's Club of Wilkinsburg presented three artists yesterday in a recital at the Penn-Lincoln Hotel. The work of the three, Letha Fragier Rankin, soprano; Charles Riley, violin, and Oscar Helfenbein, piano, with Virginia Brown Wilharm as accompanist, is so well known as to need no comment. All were at their best and, needless to say, the large audience found the program a joy from beginning to end.

The Hart House String Quartet, with Mrs. Christine Haskell, local pianist, pleased an unusually large audience when presented yesterday by the Sewickley Valley Woman's Club in the Edgeworth Club.

Philip Martindale, forest ranger from Yellowstone Park, will be the afternoon speaker tomorrow at the Congress of Clubs' quarterly meeting.

The Tourists met yesterday afternoon in the Congress of Clubs and carried out their program as scheduled.

REO WINNING EUROPEAN FRIENDS

That Europeans are turning in ever-increasing numbers to the American type of motor car is evidenced by reports coming from various quarters overseas.

According to Reo officials, the Flying Cloud has, on several occasions, wrested first honors from competing foreign automobiles by virtue of its distinguished appearance and advanced design. That the Flying Cloud is able to outclass European contestants is regarded by Reo officials as a tribute to American craftsmanship in body building and American engineering ability.

"This foreign acknowledgment of Flying Cloud design is all the more noteworthy when it is considered that the Flying Cloud is a thoroughly American car, expressive of American ideals both in appearance and performance and named in honor of the finest, fastest American clipper ship that ever sailed the seas," says R. E. Loughney, of the R. E. Loughney Motor Company.

"In beauty, in speed and in staunchness, the Reo Flying Cloud has captured the hearts of Europeans just as the clipper ship 'Flying Cloud' captured the hearts of Americans of the fifties when she set a new record for sailing vessels from New York around the Horn to San Francisco."

Gloria, Pittsburgh's two-ton flapper, may get the sun parlor for which she has been asking.

CHRYSLER HUES SHOW 1928 TREND

All signs point to a continuance next summer of the vivid automobile colorings which made American highways a blaze of variegated hues during 1927. The arbiters on whose verdict rest decisions about motors or fashions say that the preference of women has settled the question for the coming summer and furthermore that there is no prospect of a departure at any early time from the recent vogue for bright motor car finish.

However, say Chrysler color technicians, the trend is toward a more harmonious use of color, in chromatic blends which employ various related shades of the same basic color, rather than toward sharp contrasts.

Feminine taste largely guides the selection of new automobiles just as it shapes the great majority of expenditures by American families, and it has evidently decreed a permanent vogue for the light, luscious tones which have been so popular of late in home furnishings, in dress and in hosiery, though of course the more restrained finishes are still available for their adherents.

Americans of today, educated in recent years to a heightened appreciation of artistic expression—people of moderate means as well as the wealthy—have acquired an assured consciousness of quality and have definitely left behind them the timid conservatism of former times. They know the beauty of color and confidently trust their knowledge to guide their indulgence in its use.

NEW MARMON COLORS BASED ON JEWELS

Based on precious stones and their rock formations, the new jewel colors on all body styles in the new Marmon 68 line are the adoption of natural hard surface colors particularly suitable to the highly polished exterior of an automobile, according to H. H. Blumenthal, local Marmon distributor. Introduction of the new line marks the first entrance of the Marmon company into the field of low-price straight-eight manufacture.

"The jewel colors, a recent Marmon development, are matched with scientific exactness even to the stripings in the rock formations of the jewels from which they are derived," Mr. Blumenthal said. "By this means a variety of new and individual combinations are possible and the harmonies of the colors are carried out in the interiors as well as on the stripings of the wheels, louvres, window reveals and moldings."

28-YEAR HUNT FOR ARTIST ENDS; DEAD

A 28-year search for Henry A. Brown, Pittsburgh artist who disappeared from his home at 714 South avenue, old Allegheny, in 1900, eight weeks after a son had been born to his 15-year-old wife, ended today when the Missing Persons Bureau here received word from Baltimore, Md., that Brown had died there last spring and the body turned over to the University of Maryland Medical School.

William W. Brown, the son, gray-haired at 28, received the news from Mrs. Ida M. Rickenbrode of the Missing Persons Bureau. He is living at 1604 Brighton road, North Side.

The mother, now 43, is the wife of J. W. Russell and is living at 1125 Saw Mill way. Previously she had been married to William G. Rice, who died.

The identification was made through a scar on his right cheek and a 1904 newspaper clipping found in the clothing, telling of a four-year search for Henry A. Brown.

The man died last May 25, but the son did not hear of it until recently. He wrote to J. M. H. Rowland, dean at the school, whose investigation produced positive proof of identification.

"Lindy's" First Jump for Life After a Collision

A Jolt in the Air; Planes Spin; "Slim" Resorts to 'Chute; Safe Landing

In the chapter of "We" published in the Sun-Telegraph yesterday, Col. Lindbergh described his training at Kelly Field in formation and pursuit flying, in which the airman is bound to have some close calls. "Lindy" was specializing in pursuit, which combines something of all the other forms of work in the military air service. Target practice also engaged the men much of the time, but they managed to have a great deal of fun in the intervals between serioius employments.

High Praise for the Parachute

By COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH.

CHAPTER XVII.

IN WARM weather these suits acquired an odor similar to that of a goat which has been in the barn all winter and the fur itself was far from comfortable. On the trip back a piston froze in the engine. For two days the cadet was alternately roasting in the southern sun and freezing in the Texas nights while he guarded his ship and waited for a new engine.

After our return from Galveston while we were practicing formation attack on two seaters, I experienced one of the incidents of the military pilot's life. I made my first emergency parachute jump. When an Army plane crashes, the pilot is required to write a detailed report of the crash. My account was as follows:

"A nine-ship SE-5 formation, commanded by Lieut. Blackburn, was attending a DH-4B, flown by Lieut. Maughan at about a 5,000-foot altitude and several hundred feet above the clouds. I was flying on the left of the top unit, Lieut. McAllister on my right and Cadet Love leading. When we nosed down on the DH, I attacked from the left and Lieut. McAllister from the right. After Cadet Love pulled up, I continued to dive on the DH for a short time before pulling up to the left. I saw no other ship nearby.

Collision in Air

"I passed above the DH and a moment later felt a slight jolt followed by a crash. My head was thrown forward against the cowling and my plane seemed to turn around and hang nearly motionless for an instant. I closed the throttle and saw an SE-5 with Lieut. McAllister in the cockpit, a few feet on my left. He was apparently unhurt and getting ready to jump.

"Our ships were locked together with the fuselages approximately parallel. My right wing was damaged and had folded back slightly, covering the forward right-hand corner of the cockpit. Then the ships started to mill around and the wires began whistling. The right wing commenced vibrating and striking my head at the bottom of each oscillation.

"I removed the rubber band safetying the belt, unbluckled it, climbed out past the trailing edge of the damaged wing, and with my feet on the cowling on the right side of the cockpit, which was then in a nearly vertical position, I jumped backwards, as far from the ship as possible. I had no difficulty in locating the pull-ring and experienced no sensation of falling

"The wreckage was falling nearly straight down and for some time I fell in line with its path and only slightly to one side. Fearing the wreckage might fall on me, I did not pull the rip cord until I dropped several hundred feet and into the clouds.

"During this time I had turned one-half revolution and was falling flat and face downward. The parachute functioned perfectly; almost as soon as I pulled the rip cord the riser perked on my shoulders, the leg straps tightened, my head went down, and the chute fully opened.

"Lindy" Lands Safely

"I saw Lieut. McAllister floating above me and the wrecked ships pass about 100 yards to one side, continuing to spin to the right and leaving a trail of lighter fragments along their path. I watched them until, still locked together, they crashed in the mesquite about 2,000 feet below and burst into flames several seconds after impact.

"Next I turned my attention to locating a landing place. I was over mesquite and drifting in the general direction of a plowed field which I reached by slipping the chute. Shortly before striking the ground, I was drifting backwards, but was able to swing around in the harness just as I landed on the side of a ditch less than 100 feet from the edge of the mesquite. Although the impact of landing was too great for me to remain standing, I was not injured in any way. The parachute was still held open by the wind and did not collapse until I pulled in one group of shroud lines.

"During my descent I lost my goggles, a vest pocket camera which fitted tightly in my hip pocket, and the rip cord of the parachute."

During the descent all the other planes broke formation and arched around us. Every ship within sight proceeded at full speed to the spot and before long the air was full of machines. Several of the De Havilands landed in the plowing and within half an hour two planes with extra parachutes were sent to take us back to Kelly. About an hour after the crash we had two new S E.-5's and were back in the air again.

The Saving Parachute

The parachute is a marvelous invention, experimented with as early as the sixteenth century by Leonardo da Vinci.

The first parachute was built by a Frenchman in 1784. This parachute was a rigid structure covered with very strong paper and fabric. It was used in a jump from a building in Paris.

About a year later, the same type of parachute was dropped from a hot air balloon in England. Soon jumps began to be made from balloons with other types of rigid parachutes.

About 1885, Capt. Thomas Baldwin made a name for himself by jumping from hot-air balloons with a chute which was a forerunner of the present type. He was the first really successful jumper, but success in those days was judged by how long a man lived in his profession.

In 1912 the first parachute jump from an airplane was made. The container was attached to the plane and the man who did the jumping pulled the parachute out as he fell.

The war really proved that the parachute is a life-saving apparatus for use with airplanes. Early in 1918 the Allied pilots reported that German pilots were using parachutes to escape from their planes whenever they were out of control or set on fire. This was the beginning of insistent demands on the part of our allied pilots for parachute equipment. The A. E. F. tried to produce a satisfactory parachute by combining the good feature of several chutes already in existence. All of these, however, were very bulky and heavy and hard to get on the plane.

When 'Chute Doesn't Open

During the summer of 1918, the United States Air Service officials appealed to Washington for good airplane parachutes. A large number of tests were made. Finally, after combining all the good points of foreign and American chutes, a satisfactory free type of parachute was developed. By free type I mean the kind of parachute which is entirely independent of the plane.

Stories often come out in the newspapers about parachutes that fail to open. What probably really happens is that men who make jumps from planes are killed before they are able to pull the rip cord which opens a parachute.

In the past there was always a great deal of danger in testing out a new type of chute, but now they have been developed to such a high degree of efficiency that there are practically no fatalities. Each parachute that is used by the government is repacked every month and tested every six months.

"MUTE" PUZZLING, TALKS TWICE

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 24.—Washington's "Mystery Man" has become more of a puzzle to the authorities than ever.

"I am all right you need'nt call anyone," "The Mystery Man", who is supposed to be unable to talk, yelled to one of the nurses when she started for help as he was going into one of several spasms he has suffered since being taken to the Washington Hospital for treatment after being found unconscious on the outskirts of the city Saturday night. "That is the second time I have been able to speak in all my life," the supposed mute immediately wrote on a pad furnished him.

No word has been received from Herrin, Ill., from which city the man had a letter when he was found. The letter was addressed "daddy" and was signed "Helen and mother". It urged him to come home for at least a week.

The patient who is about 24 years of age, claims not to be able to talk but has spoken twice since removed to the hospital. He is unable to tell where he has been living or how long he has been in this city.

DRIVERS HELD AS CARS HIT AT TUNNEL

Thrown from an automobile which bounded against an iron pole after colliding with another machine in West Carson street near the Corliss Tunnel early today, Naomi Letzkus, 25, of Perrysville, was killed. E. L. Kramer, 25, of Gibsonia, driver of the machine, escaped with slight injuries.

Kramer was driving east on Carson street when his car collided with the machine of H. S. Schaffer of 1238 Fayette street, North Side. The force of the collision threw Kramer's car against the pole and knocked Miss Letzkus to the pavement. She was pronounced dead when taken to the Ohio Valley Hospital.

Miss Gila Pinkerton, of Ingomar, an occupant of Kramer's car, suffered an injured back and cuts on the legs. William O'Hara, another passenger, was uninjured.

Schaffer and his wife and another woman were uninjured.

Patrolman J. K. Leith who rushed the dead woman to the hospital arrested Schaffer and Kramer on charges of reckless driving. They will be turned over to the coroner today.

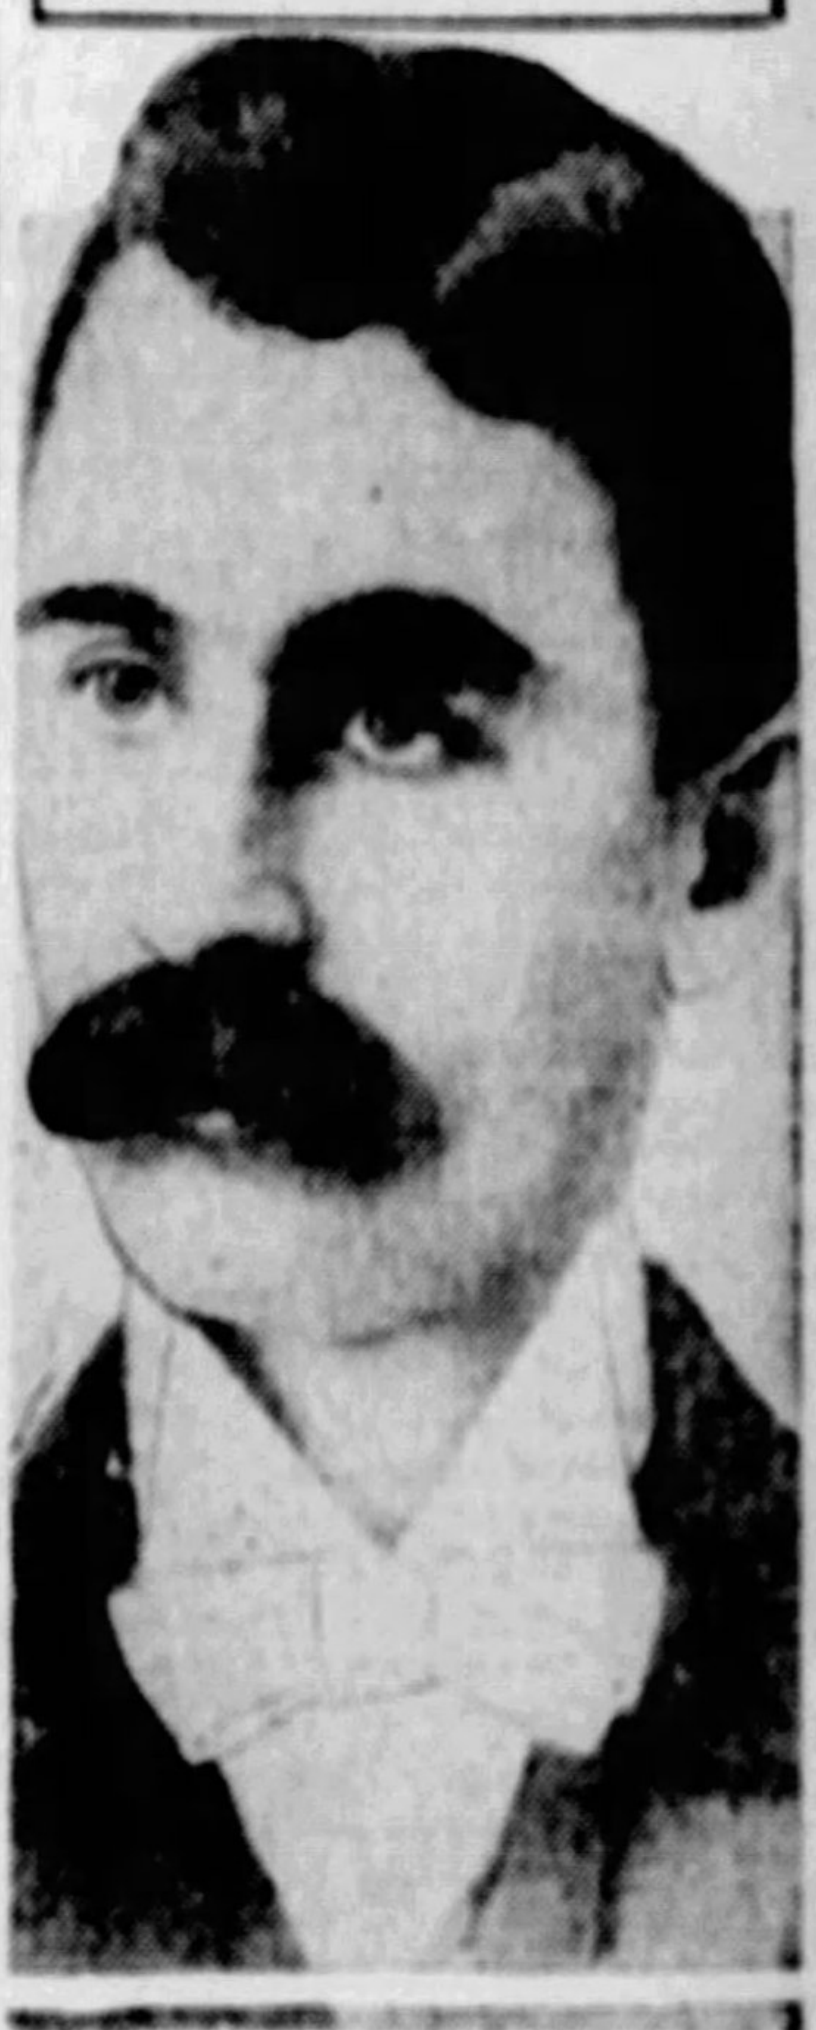
Search Ends



HENRY A. BROWN

A search for Henry A. Brown, Pittsburgh artist, which lasted for 28 years, ended yesterday with identification of his body by officials of the University of Maryland School of Medicine as one that had been turned over to their laboratory last May. Brown disappeared in 1900, leaving his 15-year-old wife with a son eight weeks old.

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH
by Harvey J. Boyle

THE communication is signed: "From a Friend who reads all your Sidewalks." What disturbs the correspondent is that the other day we made a note about a once-gay blade who now tinkers with his own machine, does gardening, and recently was downtown carrying a chip basket of groceries, while alongside of him walked his wife pushing a go-cart.

The correspondent's curiosity is aroused as to why, owning a machine, the man in question did not use it for shopping purposes. Since we mentioned in the story the fact that the man tinkered around his car we naturally figured that everybody would know the machine was laid up for repairs. Our character was one of those who get far more fun out of tinkering with the machine than in driving it.

THERE is good criticism in another letter which asks why from time to time we pay so much attention to the shadowy figures of the so-called underworld. "This is not typical of Pittsburgh which is a home-loving and church-going community," he adds soundly.

STILL, there must be some interest in the figures of the half-light world, judging from the way novelists and dramatists pay attention to them. It is not difficult, however, for us to see the criticism's basis, for as a matter of fact there seems here to be a very thin veneer of glamour about the sidewalk characters who are unconventional. They gain a halo of romance, usually, from men who imagine they must be quite interesting.

AT ELEVENTH and Penn there is a restaurant on wheels, proprietored by Billy Nixon, of Carnegie. A ball player of great ability, Billy gave up the national pastime to improve the national appetite. This restaurant can be moved from place to place, and while following the footsteps of George Rector is interesting, Nixon is contemplating a return to what we used to call the grand old game. His restaurant is not to be confused with the Nixon restaurant in Sixth avenue. That one is run by two other fellows.

Lily Finds That Florence Is a Bookkeeper at Angouleme's

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

LILLY LEXINGTON, spoiled daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS, is engaged to marry STALEY DRUMMOND, a rich bachelor much older than herself. She is fond of him, but realizes she does not really love him the day after she accepts him, when she becomes instantly and violently infatuated with a taxicab driver whom she sees down town when she goes to meet her chum, SUE CAIN. Forgetting all about Sue, she jumps into his cab and he drives her home. She learns that his name is PAT FRANCE and that he owns his own cab in a company headed by his friend, ROY JETTERSON. She marries Pat. Lily tried, and their domestic ship sailed smoother for a few months. One day Lily met SUE CAIN, an old friend, on the street. Sue invited her to a card party. Lily, without funds, went to a store and tried to charge some clothes to her father. She was informed her mother had left word that "Mrs. Patrick France could not charge things to Mr. Lexington." Staley Drummond pays her bill. Pat demands to know how she got the clothes.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

THE bill had been a horror to her for weeks. It had been gradually rolling up, getting bigger and bigger each day. "I know I shouldn't trade at this expensive place," she had told herself a dozen times. But it was hard to stop trading there so long as she owed them money right along."

But now that she had the bill wiped off the slate, she suddenly made up her mind to start trading at the grocery of Pat's father.

For a long time Pat had been urging her to. "My Dad needs all the business he can get," he had said. "And it's silly for you to be angry with my mother all this time over a pan of burned biscuits—and they'd give you a special price on everything."

The last argument was the one that settled the question for Lily. . . . If she could get a special price on food from Mr. France it would leave her more money out of her household allowance to spend on herself every week. And she needed so many things—silk garters, face powder, orange-wood sticks and coral polish for her nails, an occasional luncheon at some smart place down town where she could see the kind of people she wanted to see—her "own kind," she told herself.

So that afternoon she walked the four blocks to the little house with the brown shutters and went around to the back door.

Mrs. France was in the kitchen, making applesauce. The clean, bright room, with its well-scrubbed floor and its crisp muslin curtains, was filled with the rich odor of the fruit cooking on the back of the stove.

She looked up over her steel-rimmed spectacles in astonishment when Lily pushed open the screen door and came inside.

"Well!" she said, in her brisk, pleasant way. "This is a fine surprise!" And, as if there never had been a word between them, she walked around the table to Lily and gave her a kiss, holding her face between her hands. "Must be three months since you were here last!"

"Oh, all of that!" Lily answered, airily. "And how have you all been? How's Florence?"

She had liked Florence—the pert, the snappy, the up-and-comming—better than any of Pat's friends and relatives.

"She's just fine," said Mrs. France. "She has a new position, you know. She's bookkeeper at that little French shop down town. Hmm! I never can remember the name. It's one of those funny French names—" She stopped, trying to think.

"Not Angouleme's?" Lily gasped. It couldn't be Angouleme's!—

Mrs. France nodded. "Yes, that's it!" she replied. "It's a wonderful place, so Florence says. I've never been in it, myself—just looked into the show windows sometimes. It's too grand for me, but I suppose you've bought lots of things there."

"Yes," Lily answered faintly, glancing down at the transparent velvet coat that she had worn to the little house—the coat she had "bought" in Angouleme's the day before.

"Good grief! Wait till Pat's sister sees that check of Staley's come through!" she was thinking. "She'll know he paid for those clothes, and she's sure to tell Pat!"

Suddenly tense and terrified, she made up her mind to stay there until Florence should come home at 6 o'clock and have it out with her.

"Do taste my applesauce. I make it with brown sugar," Mrs. France was saying, bringing a tall, brown crock from the cupboard and giving Lily a spoonful of the thick, red-brown mixture in it. "I'm going to send some of it over to you and Pat when it's all made. He does like it for breakfast."

"Does he?" Lily asked, absently, with half of her mind still on Staley's check. "I always give Pat orange juice—because I fix it for myself every morning, I suppose."

"Oranges are awfully high right now," said his mother. "You'd better give up your orange juice for a while, and eat apples instead, while they're cheap—cooking apples!" She held a piece of one out to Lily on the end of her knife.

"You'd better start trading at the store, and we'll tell you what to buy," she added. "I can tell you don't know how to save money. . . . Why, it must take at least five oranges for you two people to have a glass of juice every morning—and that's just plain extravagance with oranges so high!"

Lily yawned and looked at the clock. All this talk about saving money had begun to get on her nerves. After all, there was something in life besides saving money, wasn't there? There was spending money, too, for the things you liked—even if it was a trifling thing like orange juice.

"What time does Florence get here?" she asked, and as she spoke the front door opened and Florence's voice came, greeting her mother:

"Hello, Mother! Where are you? I want to tell you something!"

Lily jumped. "She wants to tell her about the check!" she said to herself. "And I've got to stop her!"

CHAPTER XXXVI.

FLORENCE was hanging her tiny felt hat on the hooks under the mirror when Lily came rushing out into the hall to her.

She gave a start of surprise when she saw her. Then she smiled and held out both of her hands to her. "Why, it's Lily!" she cried. "We thought you were off all of us for life!—We've had a wedding present for you for a month, but we didn't want to give it to you until we were all friends again."

"Now, Flossie, there you go! Telling her all about it when we wanted to keep it for a surprise!" Mrs. France's voice came from the kitchen where the odor of potatoes frying in deep fat had taken the place of the rich applesauce smell.

"I didn't tell her what it was, though—" Florence was answering when Lily stopped her.

"What were you going to tell your mother when you first came in?" she asked in a half-whisper. "About a check that paid for some of my clothes at Angouleme's?"

Florence stared at her, her dark blue eyes opening wide. She slowly shook her head, clearly mystified. "I don't know what you mean, Lily," she said. "I don't know anything about any clothes of yours at Angouleme's—I've been there just a few days, and I'm trying to get their system before the old book-keeper leaves on Saturday. . . . No, I was going to tell mother about Sadye Jetterson. Roy's bought her a little car of her own. I just met her in it, and she's going to take us out for a ride in it after supper."

Much relieved, Lily went into the grocery store next door and bought two big bags of provisions from Pat's silent good-natured father. They grew heavier and heavier in her arms as she walked home in the gray-blue September twilight that smelled of burning leaves and dust.

Stars came out into the sky above the housetops, and all at once she found herself thinking of a starry night in the spring when she and Pat had stood together in the darkness of the backyard of the house on Montpelier road.

Where was all the wild ecstasy and passionate happiness of that spring night?

"Gone with the spring, I guess," said Lily to herself. Life had become an affair of alarm clocks, early breakfasts, electric flatirons and frying pans.

Cold with unhappiness and this new feeling of disappointment that had been coming over her ever since she had met Sue Cain in the street the day before, she unlocked the door of the flat and went in.

"Home late again, eh?" Pat's voice hailed her from the kitchen, and it sounded as out-of-sorts as she felt. He was sitting at the white table in the middle of the room, eating a sandwich that he had made himself.

"I was so hungry I had to eat something," he said. "Gosh, I wish you could arrange things so as to have a meal on time every now and then. . . . It's pretty discouraging to a man to come home to a dark empty house two or three nights in succession. And I'm getting pretty sick of it!"

Lily was standing in the doorway of the kitchen, the two heavy bags filled with canned soup, potatoes and apples in her arms—and suddenly she just let them fall with a thud and a crash upon the floor. She stepped back into the tiny dining room and threw herself down upon the nearest chair, crying and sobbing hysterically. The cans and the potatoes and apples rolled around the floor.

"Oh, it's all—discouraging!" she wept and wailed. "It's worse for me than it is for you—I gave up everything in the world—everything in the wide world!—for you!—And I wish to Heaven I hadn't—" Her words ended in a bust of sobbing gasps.

Pat did not come near her. In stony silence he finished his sandwich and made himself another one.

Then he went into the sitting-room, took the evening paper from his pocket and sat down in his arm chair to read it.

"I'm going back to the shop for a while tonight," he called to Lily when he had finished it and laid it on the table.

At that Lily raised her tear-wet face from her folded arms. "All right—go!" she told him resentfully. "Pat, I wish you'd tell me one thing before you do go, though."

He stood still, listening to her.

"I wish you'd tell me why we ever got married!"

He frowned. "We wanted to, didn't we?" he asked. "And we were getting along all right until the last couple of days. What's the matter with you, Lily? You seemed happy enough a few days ago."

Madge and Mary Concoct a Little Plot Against Noel

IT WAS not hard for me to find an opportunity to see Noel Veritzen. All I had to do was to sit down upon the farmhouse veranda on any morning. His appearance on that veranda was like clockwork, and the eager glance with which he scanned the place in search of Mary Harrison had also become so much a thing of routine that I no longer felt the impulse to quiet laughter, which the young man's patent infatuation had caused me at first.

Seeing him alone was not quite so easy, however. The veranda in summer is the family lounging place and someone is always sitting in one of the easy chairs or lounging in the hammock. Especially is it my mother-in-law's favorite resting place, and I had very cogent reasons for not wishing her to hear the things I meant to say to young Veritzen. She would have what Katie called "enough and then some more" to say when she finally should find out that Philip Veritzen was to be a dinner guest upon the coming Saturday. She did not even know that the famous theatrical producer was driving down with Lillian and Marion, and I wished to postpone giving her those items of information as long as I possibly could.

There was one sure avenue of reaching the young violinist, however, and I promptly made use of it. Seizing an opportunity when no one else was within earshot, I slipped my arm through Mary's and drew her down to my side in the hammock.

"Mary, dear, will you do something rather difficult for me?" I asked.

She looked at me suspiciously, and I realized that there had been a trace of amusement at my own question in my voice.

"You're sure you're not making game of me in some way?" she asked with an impish little grin.

"If I were I owe it to you for the way you basely deserted me and let me in for that explanation to Mother Graham about the young man with the wolfhound," I said severely, and the corners of her mouth drooped in a contrition that I knew was but mockery.

"That was pretty awful of me," she admitted, "and I do owe you something. Name the thing you want me to do and I'll attempt it, if it's to teach Jerry Ticer the etiquette book."

"It's not quite as difficult as that," I said, laughing. "I only want you to lead Noel Veritzen away from the madding crowd where I can talk to him alone for a few minutes. Of course, I know the hardest part of the job will be detaching him from your own apron strings, but I must see him by himself. If you accomplish it you may name your own reward."

There was not the slightest trace of embarrassment about her as she listened, and I mentally compared her genuine nonchalance with the giggling embarrassment with which the 16-year-olds of an earlier day listened to teasing upon the subject of their admirers.

"I thought you were going to ask me something difficult," she said. "I'll shoo Noel into the corral this very afternoon. But I'm going to hold you to your word about my reward afterward. I'll bet you a cookie you won't want to give it to me when you know what it is."

I looked at her with a little premonitory guess.

"Let's hear it," I said.

She shook her curly head emphatically.

"'Nuthin' cookin',' as Aunt Harriet's colored cook used to say," she declared. "When I deliver the goods, otherwise Noel, or, rather, the first time I see you afterward, I'll tell you what I want."

She blew me a kiss and flitted away, while I turned over in my mind the disturbing conjecture that her "reward" had something to do with Mr. "George Logan Jackson," the young man with the wolfhound, who had cast such admiring glances at her when we encountered him at the station.

The most famous drink of its kind in the world

. . . make the personal health test and find out why

. . . Find out why millions drink Postum every day, with every meal. Find out why these millions prefer Postum's flavor—why they consider Postum more satisfactory in every way than beverages containing the drug caffein.

Originally, many of these enthusiastic users were just as skeptical of Postum's goodness as you perhaps are. Then they tried Postum—made a personal health test—and were convinced!

Here's the test!

They used Postum as their mealtime drink for thirty days, in place of caffein beverages. They found that Postum offered all the enjoyment of other hot drinks—a rich, inviting aroma, a hearty, appetizing flavor all its own. They found that Postum, unlike caffein beverages, never robbed them of a minute's sleep, never flustered their nerves, or caused headaches and indigestion.

At the end of the thirty days, these Postum "skeptics" measured their physical gains—noted how much better they slept, how much better they felt. And then and there they outlawed caffein from their diet—Postum became their mealtime drink for life!

Try it yourself!

This month new thousands will take this same easy step to better health. Be one of them! Your grocer has Postum in two forms—Instant Postum, prepared instantly in the cup, and Postum Cereal, the kind you boil. Both are the same drink—made of roasted whole wheat and bran. Both have the delightful Postum flavor that millions prefer. Both cost much less than most other mealtime drinks.

Get Postum at your grocer's today—start the 30-day test!

COUNTY AUDIT GETS UNDER WAY

A staff of four accountants of the firm of Ernst & Ernst, certified public accountants, began work on the general audit of county fiscal affairs yesterday. R. F. Marburger, resident partner of the firm, is in charge of the audit.

County Controller Robert G. Woodside said that the staff would be increased when warranted. The Controller is taking no part in the actual auditing, but is keeping tab on the progress made and the type of men engaged by the accounting firm.

An appropriation of $50,000 recently was made by the County Commissioners to defray the cost of the audit. Controller Woodside said the accountants would first prepare the county debt statement, so that he could file his annual report for 1927 with court.

Corey Austin withdrew his plea of not guilty and entered a general plea of guilty, Judge Marshall fixing the degree at voluntary manslaughter after taking testimony.

During a fight, after Johnson had annoyed Spurgeon Austin's wife, Corey shot Johnson, a very large man, when he was overpowering his brother, according to the testimony.

HE WALKED FLOOR IN TERRIBLE PAIN

Many Things He Couldn't Eat, Ten Herbs Ended Years of Suffering.

MR. MILTON FRANTZ

"For seven or eight years I was bothered with pains that seemed to be in the region of my liver," was the statement of Mr. Milton Frantz, 102 Columbia Avenue, West Catasauqua, Pa. (near Allentown), according to the Ten Herbs Man, who is at the May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating the great natural medicine, Ten Herbs. "Every night I would awake with an awful pain that would compel me to walk the floor for two or three hours," Mr. Frantz continued. "In the morning I felt sleepy and tired. There were many things I could not eat without suffering great pain, and I was always bloated. I was hardly able to work, and spent a lot of money for all kinds of medicines, but nothing gave relief.

"I heard of the wonderful things Ten Herbs was doing for others, and sent for a bottle. It was the only medicine that did me any good. I used several bottles, and each gave increasing results. I can eat anything and my appetite is better than for many years. I am enjoying life once more and cannot give Ten Herbs enough praise."

Ten Herbs, which consists of ten wonderful herbal ingredients, cleanses the entire system, eliminating poisonous waste matter and impurities that may have been the cause of long suffering. It also relieves many of the disorders of the stomach and liver, and benefits and invigorates the kidneys. As a result, there are usually new feelings of health and strength over the body in general within a remarkably short time; and, as the medicine continues its work, there are often amazing benefits, so that suffering and distress that has been endured for years is relieved. Ten Herbs has helped others in this section and why not you?

The Ten Herbs Man is at the May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine. Free sample given.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

WHEN YOU ARE SLIGHTLY OLDER

WHEN you are very young, you long for all sorts of exciting things to happen. When you're a little older, you fervently hope they WON'T happen!

When you are very young, you go in for daring make-up, bizarre earrings, arty clothes and heavily beaded eyelashes—everything to make you look older and more sophisticated.

* * *

When you're a little older, you revert to flapper skirts, bobbed hair, cute little sport hats and baby-blue blouses—anything to make you look younger and more ingenuous.

HELEN ROWLAND

When you are very young, you sigh for a lover who will never deceive you. When you're a little older, you sigh for a lover who will never UNdeceive you!

When you are very young, you carefully camouflage your eagerness with an air of boredom and hard-boiled cynicism. When you're a little older, you cautiously cover your boredom and cynicism with a forced smile of eagerness and enthusiasm.

When you are very young, you pretend to distrust all men! They can't fool YOU!

When you're a little older, you KNOW that they will fool you, but you sweetly pretend to believe in them.

* * *

When you are very young, you like a string of men trailing after you; you want to be in every man's telephone book.

When you're a little older, you would rather spend one evening a week with an INTERESTING lover than have a dozen bores hanging around seven evenings a week.

When you are very young, you dream of a dashing, masterful caveman entirely surrounded by money and egotism—somebody who can thrill you and make you SUFFER.

When you're a little older, you yearn only for a nice, manageable, understanding man, who will star YOU—and make you comfortable!

* * *

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET

Tells How to Darken Gray Hair With a Home-Made Mixture

Joicey Williams, the well-known American actress, recently made the following statement about gray hair, and how to darken it, with a home-made mixture:

"Any one can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

The ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

LET ONLY THOSE WHO HAVE NEVER FAILED TO SYMPATHIZE WITH THE GOOD AND WORTHY—SYMPATHIZE WITH THE GUILTY
FAY KING

By FAY KING

IT WAS interesting to listen to the various opinions expressed so strenuously during the time the papers were so filled with Snyder and Gray.

Arguments waxed loud and long, and sympathy ran high, if not always for them, at least for those belonging to them who have suffered for their crime.

I have been looked upon by many with disdain because I can feel no sympathy or sorrow for those two guilty ones, and personally believe their families better off without them.

"Let him who is without sin cast the first stone," we hear on every side.

Naturally no stone would be cast, for none of us is without sin.

But even worse than that, many of us are even without sympathy except where it concerns the guilty!

It seems to me even more sinful to save one's sympathy and understanding only for the guilty and condemned than it is to cast stones at those who after all deserve more to be stoned than the worthy deserve to be slighted.

Employers have turned out faithful workers the moment their best years were over. Women have driven other women to suicide with malicious gossip. Parents—and good parents, too—have not hesitated to destroy the happiness of their children by unjust criticism of the one they loved.

There was need of sympathy when a mother killed herself and her babies because she could not pay the rent and the gas had been turned off.

Did you weep when you read of the plank that blew from the top of a church and killed an innocent little girl who was out walking with her father while dinner was being cooked in their little home?

Countless good and worthy persons have been driven to an unjust death or a life imprisonment of sorrow through lack of that sympathy so readily lavished on the guilty.

It is for these I prefer to weep and pray!

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.

U.S. Senator from New York

Guard General Health and Kidneys Will Function

NATURE has been kind in giving us at least two of most of our parts and organs. We have two lungs, lots of teeth, two hands, two feet, many fingers and two kidneys.

DR. COPELAND

Without the work done by the kidneys, life would end almost at once. There must be filtered from the blood those poisonous wastes which would destroy us if left in the body.

It is fortunate that there are two kidneys. Accident or disease may damage or ruin one kidney. But Nature is not upset by this loss. The other kidney will take over all the work and do it very well indeed.

Every year we widen our knowledge of the functions of the organs and of the effects upon them of habits or of disease. I have in mind the popular idea that meat eating is harmful to the kidneys. The scientists have given up that idea.

Unquestionably we eat too much of everything. We eat far more than we need. But the evil effects of meat eating are no more than the evil effects of overeating any other food.

The kidneys are peculiarly sensitive to the effects of infection. Pussy gums, abscessed teeth, infected tonsils, a chronic running ear, pus infection anywhere—these are menaces to the kidneys. Scarlet fever and other of the so-called contagious or infectious fevers may be the means of infecting the kidneys.

You cannot afford to take chances. If you have one of these diseases, or suspect you have one of the infections I have named, your family doctor should be consulted.

The wastes of the body cannot be carried away until they are put into solution. For this reason we need lots of water. Most of us do not drink enough anyhow.

There is much to be thought of in selecting the drinking water. It must be pure water, free from organic substances. But that isn't enough. If it is to be useful in taking up the body wastes, it must be soft as possible.

Hard water is "hard" because it has dissolved all the mineral substances it is capable of taking. Soft water, on the other hand, is free from mineral content and is ready to take up the poisons which develop in the body. Find a good spring water, soft as I have suggested, and drink a lot every day. It will help the kidneys to function.

Don't worry about Bright's disease or other kidney trouble. Care for the general health, keep all the organs in good condition, and the kidneys will take care of themselves.

ETHEL WATERS, star of "Africana," Ethiopean revue holding forth in the Nixon.

ODETTE MYRTIL, comedienne in "Countess Maritza," operetta being presented in Alvin.

BILLIE DOVE has the leading feminine role in "The Love Mart," showing in Grand.

GLORIA SWANSON is "Sadie Thompson" in the picture of that title on Penn screen.

Ethel Waters in "Africana" Reveals Poetry and Humor Capturing Nixon Audience

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

GEORGE SEIBEL

AFTER the glitter and blaze of the revues that Messrs. Ziegfeld, Carroll and White have brought, "Africana" at the Nixon last night seemed drab and tame, especially in the first act. There is more nature than art in it—much humor, and little wit—real poetry, but uncut and unpolished. In short, "Africana" lacks something in order to make it strike fire. Even Ethel Waters with her great natural gifts, bubbling over with true comedy spirit, does not lift the performance above the level of the ordinary.

Ethel Waters, there is no blinking the fact, is a comedienne of infectious charm. She has not much of a voice, and it's a queer fluffy voice that caresses the words she sings, but she can coax poetry out of her ballads and put character into a grin. Some of her songs are very melodious, like "Smiles" and "I'm Coming, Virginia," and into these she pours a wealth of sentiment; others give her an opportunity to present character studies, both by her strut and her facial mimicry, that justify the praise she has received. But it is all more spontaneous than finished—she is fluid, rather than plastic. And that applies to the entire company in greater or less degree. That rich, natural comedian, Alex Lovejoy, irresistibly droll as the judge in the court room skit, would be vastly better if the act were geared up a bit by an alert stage manager.

Walter Richardson has a fine voice, the Old-Fashioned Quartet make sweet melody, the Bell Hops do some remarkable dancing, George Randel sings the "Clorinda" romance beautifully, assisted by Gladys Cross. In fact, there are many admirable moments in "Africana," even aside from Ethel Waters' vein of poetry and humor, but as a whole it gives one the effect of something that "just growed," and needs a course in college to finish it. With abundance of good material—some very fine material, in fact—the producers have not got the most out of it. To balance this, some of the unsavory features of other revues are lacking. This fact, and the genuine humor that pervades the offering, and the quaint charm of Ethel Waters are the redeeming features that make the performance worth seeing.

Penn to Benefit by New Stage Studios

The Penn Theater announces the organizing of great producing studios to produce for the chain of theaters in which the Penn is affiliated in the most elaborate of stage productions. The men engaged to make these productions are John Murray Anderson, who produced "Greenwich Village Follies" and "Music Box Revues," Jack Partington, originator of the Paul Ash shows, Boris Petroff of the Russian Imperial Ballet, and Frank Cambria, noted for his productions in movie houses. The purpose is to bring to all the Loew Theaters a better and greater stage show. The first of these shows comes next week to the Penn. It is "Banjomania," staged by Jack Partington.

"Sadie Thompson" Is Pictured in Penn

The complicated adventures of Sadie Thompson, which furnished W. Somerset Maugham material for his tale of "Miss Thompson," which was the basis of the play, "Rain," are again envisioned in "Sadie Thompson," starring Gloria Swanson, presented as the Penn photoplay feature. It is a rather more violent Sadie than we have been accustomed to, this one given by Miss Swanson, but her emotionalism is an interesting, high strung mood that contrasts strongly with the later repression of a repentant Miss Thompson. The photoplay is more restrained than either of its originals and is equally as dramatic, the star's characterization being likely to be considered one of her best. Lionel Barrymore is strongly effective as the reformer and Raoul Walsh, who directed the picture, is sturdy and likeable as "Handsome" O'Hara. On the stage Dave Harmon and his orchestra, Lewis and Dody, the "Hello, Hello, Hello" singing comedians, Six Tivoli Dancing Girls, Marjorie Whitney, dancer, Toots Novello, upside down dancer, and Earl & Bell, singers, appear in "Oddities." Organ and orchestra music also are featured.

Musical Melange Is Feature in Sheridan

"Suite 16," a miniature musical melange, tops the stage bill which opened yesterday in the Sheridan Square. Ray Gordon and Nell Healey are featured. Chelm St. Orr shows what versatile toes can do. He plays musical instruments with the toes of his right foot. Hope Vernon sings and chatters. Takio offers a novel act. The photoplay feature is "A Man's Past," starring Conrad Veidt, European actor. It concerns a famous physician, who makes his escape, after being sent to prison for 10 years.

CONRAD VEIDT STAR IN CAMEO PICTURE

"A Man's Past," starring Conrad Veidt, noted character actor from Europe, is the current photoplay in the Cameo. The story of the picture concerns a famous physician, who is sentenced to prison for putting to death one of his patients, who suffered from an incurable disease. Barbara Bedford has the feminine lead. Other players include George Seigmann, Ian Keith, Corliss Palmer and Charles Puffy. A new "Collegiate" film and news pictures are on the bill.

ELEPHANT TRIO IN DAVIS

The human performers in the Davis Theater this week have to compete with three elephants which fully justify the claims made by naturalists as to the brain power of these wise old fellows. They act just like human beings—one of them even plays drunk, with hat on one ear and flourishing a bottle. The other feature of the vaudeville program is Bob Hall, a rapid-fire rhymester with a song ready on any topic the audience furnishes him. He doesn't rise to the heights of Tennyson, but he's a Lindbergh for speed. Frank Fisher and Eldrie Gilmore show how the modern Juliet brings her bashful Romeo to time, followed by a skit on matrimony one year after the honeymoon. Jacque Hayes and Irene Cody extract much fun out of their contrasting fat and lean figures, both assembled in Pittsburgh. A pleasing quartet of dancers—Sherry, Mattison and the Anders Sisters—open the program. "The California Nighthawks" close it, with jazz, comedy, songs, eccentric dancing, and an effective fan dance by Lucille Middleton. The photoplay is a comedy entitled "Two Flaming Youths," in which W. C. Fields and Chester Conklin performed their customary antics with a circus background.

Pittsburgh Girl Has Lead in Gayety

"Joy Riders," burlesque in the Gayety, features Clyde Bates, heavyweight comedian, and Opal Taylor, Pittsburgh girl, who appears in leading roles in several skits as well as being the singing principal in song numbers requiring the assitance of the chorus. Frank Mack is the secondary comedian and he also contributes a harmonica pecialty which pleases. Buddie Nichols is a tiny miss who is a good dancer. She, Miss Taylor and Jean Gaskell also appear in a ukulele specialty. The best quartet act in ages is presented by Bates, Lew Petel, Frank and Jess Mack. After singing one terrible line they leave the stage and a shot is heard. A trio returns and the same procedure occurs until only Bates is left—and he is shot from the orchestra. An added feature that holds much interest is the mind-reading performance of Ala Rageh.

"Countess Maritza," Alvin Attraction, Is Amusing, and Treat For Musical Ears

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

WITH an opulence of music, vocal strength in principals and chorus, and abundant measure of comedy, romance and all-around entertainment value, "Countess Maritza" revealed itself to a large audience in the Alvin last night as an operetta of unusual merit. Bejeweled with melodic pearls that have all the tuneful appeal of popular "hits," so-called, but which yet possess a dignity of expression that elevates them above the common songs of the day without putting them into the stilted aristocracy of the classic opera, "Countess Maritza" is a treat for musical ears as well as jolly, pleasing amusement throughout. From the opening number, "Dear Home of Mine, Good-Bye," duet in the prologue, to "Brown-Eyed Girl," trio in the third act, there is not a song that does not have some special appeal.

Walter Woolf, leading male voice in the operetta, as well as player of the principal masculine role, sang in a manner befitting his premier position in the cast as well as acting his part well. He lent vigor and manliness to his characterization of a count whose waste caused the loss of his ancestral home for debts, causing him to go to work as an overseer on another estate in an effort to redeem himself.

Gladys Baxter, who has personal attractiveness as an additional asset to a pleasing singing voice, was a charming countess in the title role, her estate being that to which the count masquerading as a servant betook himself to work his way up in the world again. Odette Myrtil was a gypsy girl who fell in love with the count, rather complicating things, since he was in love with the countess and the latter was not unconscious of the attraction existing in her servant.

The foregoing is a brief sketch of the romantic angle, running concurrent to which is the comedy side. First in this is the arrival of the countess, bringing as her guest a sister of the count, to the consternation of the latter, who pledges her to secrecy without telling her the real reason he is there. Second is the arrival of a veritable comic opera prince to whom the countess had promised an answer to his proposal. Third is her invention of a fiance, giving him the name of a person she supposed did not exist, so she could give the prince a refusal. Fourth is the coming of this baron, whom she supposed lived only in her mind, coming to claim her in accordance with an announcement of the betrothal of the countess she had caused to be published.

If these complications, which seem to mean confusion, but which, in reality, work out with extreme smoothness and rapidity of action, are not sufficient to assure a full evening of fun, what would you? More? Well, it is there, including an escaped thief, who becomes a servant in the home of the countess and whom the general causes to pose as the countess' imaginary baron, with the alternative of being "shot at sunrise."

Harry Morton, featured comedian of the company, is the escaped thief, a part which he clowned with happy results, and in which he danced so—well, he is a great dancer. So is George Dobbs, who played the baron. Marjorie Peterson was dainty and winsome and danceful as the sister of the count. Robert Greig was an eye-rolling mountain of a prince whose elephantine love-making caused much laughter.

Among the especially pleasing songs, in fact the featured number, was "Play, Gypsy," in which the voices of Mr. Woolf and the chorus were heard with dramatic effect. As rendered, it was quite electrifying, since this is a chorus that can sing. There was accompaniment by a gypsy orchestra, in which Miss Myrtil played her violin well as a member of the band. Her singing also was appreciated.

"Countess Maritza" is something you are sure to like unless you are very hard to please.

Comedy Is Given by East End Players

Harry Schwartz's players are doing a turn at comedy in the East End Theater this week. Their new presentation is "The Alarm Clock" and it served to keep a large audience in almost continuous laughter last night.

The title may mislead you, for the play has nothing to do with time-pieces or any alarm-sounding rides, such as Paul Revere undertook. Instead, it concerns a rich young bachelor in New York, who develops rheumatism in one foot. The wife of a Senator, who is quite interested in the young bachelor, induces a physician to diagnose the case as gout, due to a life of dissipation. Not content with that, she brings a collection of country relatives on for a visit. Of course, this all leads into many laugh-provoking situations.

Ray Rawlings affects a few grey hairs and portrays the bachelor. Blanche Wilcox, who has ability, plays the heroine. Other players are Ed Downes, Mildred Lee, Ernest Kast, Beth Burke, J. Arthur Gordon, Grace Witcher, Ted Johnstone and Phil Van Zandt.

VERSATILE ACT IN ALDINE

Emile Boreo headlines the vaudeville in the Aldine this week. He plays the piano, tells a couple of stories and offers a dramatic recitation, dedicated to Col. Lindbergh. He also sings in a manner peculiar to Emile, displays how versatile an old soft hat can be and "does" the "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers." Guiran and Marguerite, with a ballet of six capable dancers, present an act, "Coral Gables Revue." Toe dancing and adagio work are featured. "The Little Liar," featuring Jimmy Sargent and Ada Howard, concerns a stable boy, who is masqueraded as a gentleman. Various vocal selections are introduced as the action of the little plot unfolds. El Cota and Byrne are responsible for an entertaining act. The feminine member of the team dances, while the partner plays the xylophone. Elly goes to the nursery for her entertainment and keeps the audience amused while she juggles a rocking horse, doll house and such. "Fashion Madness," with Claire Windsor in the role of a pampered child of a millionaire, is the photoplay feature.

MYSTERY PLAY IN HARRIS

The stage show in the Harris this week includes about 20 or so minutes of mystery mixed with laughs. The sketch that is responsible for this is titled "Sycamore 606" and it proves a sort of burlesque on the present-day type of mystery play on the legitimate stage. The photoplay feature is "In a Moment of Temptation," which is nothing to get excited about. The cast includes Charlotte Stevens, Grant Withers and Cornelius Keefe. Harris and Vaughn are responsible for a skit, "Waiting for the Bus." Jimmy Bary and Odey LaMarr hand out another skit, "Forget Your Troubles." Walter Brower, who is one of the features of the bill, is a monologist who is a laugh-maker. Another act on the bill is Celina's Eccentric Animals, in which a number of dogs perform. The Olympic Trio, athletes, an organlogue and short screen entertainment complete the bill.

"SORRELL AND SON" CAMERAPHONE FILM

"Sorrell and Son," one of the finest pictures in a season, is in the Cameraphone this week. This photoplay, based on the widely read novel of the same name, stars H. W. Warner, who gives an outstanding portrayal of Capt. Sorrell, a father who sacrifices much for the welfare of his son, Kit. The cast includes Alice Joyce, Anna Q. Nilsson and Nils Asther.

Eating Beefs' Liver Makes Old Folks Feel Younger

The scientists have been busy again and now comes a marvelous discovery—

Beef Livers are full of vitalizing Vitamines—just the kind of vitamines that turn thin, watery blood into rich red blood in such a short space of time that even physicians are astonished.

Some physicians call these wonderful vitamines the "Mysterious Substance" but whatever the name, they do put red blood, strength, vigor and vitality into weak, worn-out, thin blooded people.

You can get the benefit of these vitamines by eating liver, but that process is too slow for the average ambitious American.

So now scientists are extracting these vitamines or "mysterious substance" from fresh beefs liver and putting them up in the form of an elixir called "Hemo-Liver."

How a man may look when his blood is thin and weak—and the change that takes place when the blood is rich and red.

While thousands of people of all ages are restoring their health with Hemo-Liver old folks find that it is ju what they need to make them feel younger.

They can't grow younger in years but they can grow younger in spirit and that is just what the thinking ones are doing.

Why not get a big bottle of Hemo-Liver today—eight days' treatment—from any live druggist who keeps abreast of the times and if after you have taken one bottle you don't say Hemo-Liver is the greatest health builder you ever heard of—get your money back.

"Men and women who are suffering from lowered vitality, general weakness, overwork, nervous breakdown or anemia can put their faith in Hemo-Liver. For feeble old people, girls 13 to 18 and in convalescence it won't fail. It strengthens the nerves, increases the red blood cells, promotes health and rebuilds energy so quickly that often physicians are astonished."

You can get Hemo-Liver at all May Drug Stores.

WILL ENTER N.Y. MEET IF GIVEN PERMIT

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—"If the permit to Dr. Otto Peltzer to compete in the United States is granted by the foreign relations committee of the Amateur Athletic Union, his first race in America will be run in the Millrose games in Madison Square Garden on February 2," it was announced last night by officials of the Millrose A. A.

They stated they had just received a telegram from Dr. Peltzer in San Francisco stating that he wished to enter the Millrose games provided the A. A. U. committee granted this permit.

When Dr. Peltzer made his first visit to New York he desired to run in the famous Millrose "600." His telegram, however, states that he had not had enough indoor competition, nor has he had enough time to train seriously since the permit from the German Amateur Athletic Federation was received. He, therefore, has named a half-mile as the distance at which he would prefer to run in his American debut.

Dr. Peltzer's opponents have not yet been named, the Millrose games committee stated, but it is certain that Lloyd Hahn will run the Rodman Wanamaker mile. Thus, the two are not likely to meet unless it is arranged in subsequent meets.

It is understood that the 21-day restriction does not apply in the case of Dr. Peltzer. His status is the same as Edvin Wide, so that the duration of his athletic performances is limited only by the number of performances promised, which seem likely to be increased.

Peltzer expects to get today the necessary permission to run in this country.

Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U., announced last night that the vote of the foreign relations committee, of which he is a member, will be made public at 11 a. m. today.

PERRY BATTLES SOUTH HILLS

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

Inasmuch as this is a season of upsets in the City League, and Section 1 already has had its bit of surprise, attention is now focused on Section 2, wherein South Hills High School, leader and main contender for the big title, battles Perry High School on the former's court this afternoon.

South Hills, while it has a superb team and remains undefeated, is not as "head-and-shoulders" above its divisional rivals as Schenley was before it was "taken" by Fifth Avenue. And therefore there is more possibility of an upset.

Other city loop games today find Allegheny at Carrick and Langley at Oliver.

JOE DUNDEE HANDS SIMONICH TRIMMING

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 24—(AP.)—Joe Dundee, welterweight champion of the world, last night proved that he was master of Joe Simonich of Butte, Mont., in 10 gory rounds before a crowd of 7,000 at the Arena.

Meanwhile, Simonich proved that he is as game and tough a boxer as in the ring today. In the first round the Butte assassin started to bleed from a split lip, and with Dundee raining leather in his face from then until the end of the tenth round, that wound was kept open and the blood stained the bodies of both fighters.

Simonich took everything in hope of getting over one punch that would do the business, but he was never successful.

SHADY SIDE SIX WINS

CHAMPIONS come and go but the Duquesne Lafayettes, standard-bearers of the Allegheny County League, seem to go on forever with no signs of cracking under the strain.

Crowned champions of the County loop last winter due mainly to the efforts of Ganzy Benedict, star forward of the team, the Lafayettes were expected to meet with sterner opposition this season when Ganzy left the club to play for Duquesne University.

The play of the Lafayettes, however, does not appear to be affected as a result of Benedict's absence, in fact the team at the present time is displaying as good form if not better than that of last winter.

The Scarlet Hurricane swept through the first round of the County League schedule this winter without the loss of a decision and as a result is assured of a place in the elimination at the close of the schedule.

Starting the second round, the Lafayettes suffered a defeat at the hands of the ever-dangerous Goose Goslins, but lost little time in regaining their winning stride at the expense of Butler.

Supported by the entire town of Duquesne, a hot-bed for professional basketball, the Lafayettes are repaying their followers by giving them exhibitions of the popular winter indoor sport that compares with the best in the state.

CHINNERS LEVINE, one of the best basketball stars turned out of Fifth Avenue High School, now a resident of Duquesne, ranks the Lafayettes as one of the smoothest-working professional quintets ever organized in this vicinity. Chinners has seen the best of them in action during his long career on the floor and is qualified to speak on the caliber of various teams.

Unlike their rivals in the Allegheny county League, the Lafayettes do not make wholesale shifts in their lineup, one of the reasons they are winning consistently.

The present Lafayette team, with the exception of George Ramsay and Dober, who were signed this winter, was developed from a group of youngsters who have been playing together for a number of years under the excellent coaching of Ed Minnick.

Andy Benedict, George Ramsay, Dober, Joe Gubby, Howy Morrow and Ed Pieffer all have had years of experience as basketball players. Every player is an expert in his particular position, the result of which gives the Lafayettes a passing attack which compares favorably with the best of any club in this section of the country.

That Duquesne appreciates the efforts of the Lafayettes to place that town on the basketball map is easily shown by the manner in which the townsfolk entertain the athletes at the close of the season. The Lafayettes will be the recipients of another elaborate banquet this year, if their showing to date means anything.

SPEAKING of the Allegheny County League race, followers of this league are overlooking the Goose Goslins of the South Side as a challenger. This club has gathered together a galaxy of star performers in an effort to capture the second-round championship and judging by their showing to date, the popular South Siders stand an excellent chance of entering the title playoffs.

Tommy Goslin, sponsor of the club, succeeded in signing such well-known basketball players as Artie Hoffman, McVicker, Whitey Littell and several others to give the South Side a winning floor machine. The Goslins were the only team to score a victory over the Lafayettes this year.

DRIBBLES

The Cumberland Knights of Columbus will entertain the New York Celtics, world's professional champions, in the Maryland city next Sunday afternoon. Cumberland is one of the few tri-state towns that permit Sunday basketball games.

The Braddock American Legion will be the attraction at the Columbus Temple tonight, engaging the Enoch Rauh Club in an Allegheny County League battle. The Rauhs appear to have the "Indian sign" on the Braddock team, having scored three victories over the Legion quintet to date.

St. Catherines of Beechview will meet the Siano Club on the Broadway floor tonight in the only game scheduled in the P. & O. League. St. Catherines, after getting off to a winning start, slumped in mid-season and has been unable to regain its natural stride. This team includes in its lineup several prominent passers and is bound to show an improvement.

The Swiftwing Club, enjoying one of the best seasons of its career as a basketball team, wants to book games at home and abroad with midget quintets. Call Joseph Pasuit at Hemlock 1338, or write 64 Magdalene street.

The Young Men's Hebrew Association passers are eagerly awaiting their invasion of Wilkes-Barre and Scranton, scheduled in March. March 3, the Bellefielders meet the Wilkes-Barre Y. M. H. A. and the next day appear in Scranton.

The R. H. Lawry Club is ready to book games at home and abroad with junior teams. Call Homestead 1681-W between 5 and 6 o'clock, or write Paul McKnight, 212 Walnut street, West Homestead, Pa.

The Barlow A. C. is leading the procession in the Ambridge Community League, scoring victories in its first seven games. This team is ready to arrange games with light first-class clubs in the Pittsburgh district. Write Morris Heacock, Leetsdale, Pa., or call Ambridge 707-J between 5:30 and 6:15.

A packed house turned out at Columbus Temple last night to see the Sianos score their first victory of the year over the J. J. Mieles in a P. & O. League contest. Yans Wallace starred for the winners. The score was 18 to 14.

The Enoch Rauhs were stopped by the Goose Goslins after scoring two successive victories in the Allegheny County League race. The Goslins turned the trick for the second time this season at the Market House, winning by a score of 27 to 25. Roy O'Donovan and Sticks Monohan were in the Goslin lineup.

Two of them, however, Herman Folins of Ambridge and A. Andrucci, reached the finals, but lost out to Boston opponents. Folins lost to Gene Banco and Andrucci was beaten by Tony Shucco.

Folins won his way to the final round by whipping Nick Florenti in a three-round bout and Andrucci won over Tom Harper in three rounds.

Tartan Plebes Strive to Gain In Studies

As the result of a comprehensive system of tutoring, scholastic deficiencies among the members of last season's brilliant freshmen football team at the Carnegie Institute of Technology are being kept down to a minimum this year. Under the supervision of Alfred C. Irwin, assistant graduate manager of athletics and freshman coach, a group of about 20 freshmen gridiron athletes are being "nursed" along with the idea of removing the possibility of ineligibility for the season of 1928.

Every evening from 7:30 to 9:30 the 20 plebes meet in one of the rooms of the gymnasium for classes that are tutored by senior students nominated for the assignment by the faculty. The principal subjects that are taken up are mathematics, chemistry and descriptive geometry. Each day's problems are discussed and when a plebe wants assistance in particular he is coached on the spot.

C. C. Pyle, will win.

WHEN it comes to athletic marvels, consider the brothers Kolehmainen, Willie and Hannes, who are in training for two big tests of heart and endurance.

Willie, at 40, is working out daily for C. C. Pyle's cross-country race, which starts from Los Angeles, March 4, and Hannes, close to 40, is training similarly for the Olympic Marathon at Amsterdam, by damb, and each is confident he will win.

WILLIE was the first of the Finnish brothers to enter the long-distance running game. He started when he was 17 and in the next four years won 19 full-distance Marathons. Then he turned professional, visualizing a pot of gold for his efforts. The professional running craze was at its height then, with St. Ives, Dorando and the rest very much in

Jackets Oppose Dukes

By JESS CARVER.

TONIGHT'S local college basketball game, a Tri-State Conference one, between the Dukes of Duquesne University and the Yellow Jackets of Waynesburg College, up on the Bluff, or, to be geographically correct, under the Bluff, will be a tough one.

Marking the contest in advance as being "tough" is putting the matter somewhat as George Bungle might, though George would probably be able to figure out in advance just how it was going to turn out. The Jackets, always dangerous, will enter the game hopped up over the licking they handed Andy Kerr's Wash-Jeff Presidents Saturday night. The Dukes will be possessed with the idea of keeping their conference slate clean, escaping, if possible, another defeat, for their record is already somewhat clogged with

BASEBALL ACES SIGN FOR '28 SEASON

By DAVIS J. WALSH,
International News Service Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—According to Wall street odds, established in the great emergency today because the season will open in at least two and a half months, the world's champion New York Yankees ought to finish no better than first in the 1928 American League pennant race.

The Yanks are held at odds as short as a breathless pant, or maybe a pair of them, by W. L. Darnell & Co., betting commissioners in the so-called street. One dollar, in fact, can get you as many as two provided the Yanks don't win.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, 1927 National League champions, likewise are esteemed over their field, but not prohibitively so. The Pirates are a 2-to-1 shot, alike in Wall Street and in the winter books of the Middle West, with the St. Louis Cardinals and the Chicago Cubs a half-pace back at odds of 2½ to 1.

Meantime, our Mr. McGraw will be getting along so nicely without the 125 runs that Rogers Hornsby drove in last year that the Giants are regarded as being no better than a 3¼ to 1 bet in Wall Street and are rated equally with the Cincinnati Reds at 4 to 1 in the West. Another reaction to the Hornsby matter is the fact that the Boston Braves, hitherto worth all of 20 cents on the dollar, have been elevated to the status of a near-contender at 12 to 1.

Local Cue Champ to Retire

TAKING his cue from President Coolidge, John A. Clinton, Jr., last night laid his material cue aside and gave the billiard world a final thrill in the form of an announcement that he did not choose to run points in defense of his national amateur 18.2 balk line crown in 1928.

John Clinton, Jr.

Clinton, who won the national title trophy for the P. A. A. in 1926 and 1927, gave "pressure of business" as the reason for his retirement.

According to friends here, Clinton has had little time for practice in recent months and there is no indication that he will enjoy more leisure in months to come. The action of the national billiard moguls about a month ago, when they postponed the 18.1 tourney because Clinton was not able to compete at that time, indicated that news of his retirement will occasion considerable regret.

E. Z. Wainwright, another P. A. A. star, will play in the 18.2 tourney in New York in February in an effort to keep in Pittsburgh the title Clinton has vacated.

BRING ON GENE OR JACK—GOB

BOSTON, Jan. 24.—(AP.) Jack Sharkey will box Gene Tunney or Jack Dempsey, but no one else, it was announced this morning after a six-hour conference between Sharkey's manager, Johnny Buckley, and Jess McMahon, Madison Square Garden matchmaker, in which an offer to match the Boston sailor with Johnny Risko, Cleveland heavyweight, was definitely turned down.

Buckley told McMahon that his man was through with eliminations of the type of the proposed Risko bout and, in addition, rejected the possibility of a fight with Jack Delaney. The bout with Risko was to have been staged in New York, March 12.

McMahon at once dispatched a telegram to Tex Rickard in Miami, Fla., informing him of Sharkey's demand.

Buckley said that since Tunney had been reported anxious to defend his title twice next summer, Sharkey was willing to take him on in June, leaving a September date to Dempsey.

"Jack wants to meet Gene first

GREY EAGLE WON'T CUT SALARY

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 24.—(AP.)—Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Americans, announced last night that Tris Speaker, centerfielder for the Senators, undoubtedly will be given his unconditional release from the club on February 1. Final decision on the matter, Griffith said, would be made within the next few days.

When informed that Speaker, who is en route from his home in Texas to Georgetown, S. C., for a hunting trip, had said he would not voluntarily reduce his salary, as requested by Griffith last season, the Washington club owner said:

"Very well, then. If Speaker won't do that then the possibility of him in a Senator uniform this season is mighty slim.

Griffith had announced earlier in the day that unless Speaker offered to reduce his salary by February 1,

NOTES of the BOXERS

PHIL GOLDSTEIN and Willie Davies, local scrappers, won their battles out of town last night. Phil defeated Jack Charity in 10 rounds at Newark, N. J., scoring a nine-second knockdown in the seventh round. Davies turned in a neat victory over Ernie Jarvis, the English flyweight, at Toronto.

Johnny Urban and Marco Polo, local light-heavies, did not fare so well in bouts in New York. The former lost a six-round decision to Ted Sandwina, the German, and Polo dropped a similar verdict to Lew Barba on the same card.

Frankie Buff, New Kensington featherweight, boxes Al Corbett of Cleveland in a 10-round windup at Clarksburg, W. Va., February 1. Buff recently knocked out Harry Harmon of Erie in two rounds at Clarksburg.

Bud Taylor, the bantamweight champion, meets Phil Zwick of Cleveland in a 10-round bout at Milwaukee tonight. Vince Dundee, brother of Joe, boxes Jackie Fields at Los Angeles.

Ball Players Sign; Springtime in Line

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

Still hangs a shadow chill and dark
The hot dog's song is mute,
Nor any sign of Spring is there,
Nor any pennants in the air,
Nor any voice to root.

And stark and still the stands arise
To frown against the stormy skies
Where tempests agitate,
But now the boys begin to sign
Their names upon the dotted line,
And Spring is at the gate.

CHILLY SAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE

NO city in baseball stresses "the gate" as does New York. Since Babe Ruth took away much of the Giants' popularity, the owners of this club have tried many plans to bring back the prestige, but so far they have found nothing to combat Babe Ruth's tremendous appeal. Rajah Hornsby was supposed to give the turnstiles more pep, but the famed hitter failed to pack 'em in.

NOW comes a New York scribe who states that Hornsby lacks "color." Can it be that the fans' attitude to the second-sacker was a contributing factor in the big deal that sent Rajah to Boston? The same writer points out that Francis Hogan is colorful.

OPINIONS on Hogan and Jimmy Welch have been drawn from Dave Bancroft, erstwhile manager of the Braves, and from Hornsby. Here's what Bancroft says of the two new Giants:

"Hogan is a great catcher. He has a wonderful throwing arm, thinks fast and is a good hitter. I think that he will be the best catcher in the league this year. Welch is ready and will have a great year. If McGraw needed a catcher and an outfielder more than a second baseman I think that he made a very good trade."

And this is Hornsby's compliment to the two lads who figured in the swap:

"Hogan is a very good prospect for a great catcher. I also think Welch is a great outfielder."

JUDGE LANDIS has been fighting baseball gambling of all kinds. The judge has done much to keep the betting at the parks down to a fairly respectable minimum, but he cannot prevent the making of books and that sort of thing. For example, a future book has been compiled by the gamblers of St. Louis relative to the 1928 major league races.

IT WILL be interesting to Pirate fans to know that the betting fraternity has selected the Pirates as National League favorites. The table of odds quoted against the National League clubs by the St. Louis men follows:

Clubs.	1st.	2nd.	3rd.
Pittsburgh	2-1	7-10	out
Chicago	5-2	1-1	5-6
St. Louis	5-2	1-1	2-5
New York	4-1	5-2	3-5
Cincinnati	4-1	5-2	3-5
Boston	12-1	5-1	2-1
Brooklyn	50-1	10-1	4-1
Philadelphia	100-1	40-1	15-1

BUNTS

British sportsmen are all washed up on Bobby Jones since Bobby returned that $50,000 domicile.

The Britons were somewhat concerned over another $50,000 Bobby is reported to have made for his literary achievements, but apparently they have winked at this development.

A definition for amateurism is needed, according to the British viewpoint. The gent who defines that will-of-the-wisp term correctly deserves the Nobel prize for achievement.

Judging by the present code, an amateur golfer is a star performer who uses his prestige to bring himself a princely sum for writing about the sport.

terday from New York, where on Sunday night they took another one on the chin from the Rangers. The Bruins, losing to Detroit the same night, slipped out of first place in the league and into a tie with the Rangers. Tonight a victory over the Pirates will enable the locals to get back into the lead for a day or so at least, as the Rangers are idle until Thursday.

The Pirates, for all they have won but half a dozen games so far, have yet to lose to Boston, both of the previous games between the two teams ending in ties.

The Bruins returned from Detroit yesterday, and despite the fact that Sunday night's game with the Cougars was a hard one, seemed none the worse physically for the struggle. The Pirates, with McCurry suffering from bruises and a shake-up obtained in a collision with Ching Johnson in New York, are not in the best of shape.

Pittsburgh will entrain for Pittsburgh after the game tonight to prepare for a second encounter with the locals, which is to be played in Pittsburgh Saturday night.

The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh.		Boston.
Worters	G	Winkler
Burke	D	Hitchman
McCaffrey	D	Shore
Milks	C	Frederickson
Darragh	W	Galbraith
Cotton	W	Oliver

Pittsburgh spares—Drury, White, McKinnon, Smith and McCurry. Boston spares—Connor, Gainor, Clapper, Cleghorn and Harrington.

the public eye. That was the greatest mistake of Willie's life, for the popularity of the professional sport was short-lived and the door was forever closed to amateur competition for him. Hannes followed in his footsteps, and, profiting by Willie's error, never forsook his amateur status. He won the Olympic Marathons of 1912 and 1920, and thinks he can repeat this year.

IN THE Pyle cross-country grind Willie sees again that pot of gold he sought so many years ago, and he is prepared to drop his work as a bricklayer long enough to go after it.

A prematurely old and wrinkled little man, Willie told of his hopes the other day.

"We Finns last a long time at the running game," he said. "Why should I be through at 40? If I thought I did not have a chance to win, I would not start. I have worked hard and saved my money and can afford to take a chance. My family will want for nothing while I am gone. And if I win—and I will not admit there is a chance of not winning—I shall not have to work any more. First prize is $25,000. It's a worthwhile reward for the effort.

"It is estimated that the winner will have to average 60 miles a day in the cross-country run. That is easy. I can run that comfortably in less than 10 hours, leaving me 14 hours in which to rest out of every 24. Or, traveling 12 hours a day, I can cover the distance in little more than a walk. I can run from morning to night easier than I can walk. With good food and water and rest I can keep up the grind indefinitely."

IN TRAINING, Willie has been running 20 miles each morning at his trade besides. He plans ig at his trade besides. He plans to leave for the Coast within a few weeks and will continue his training there until he lines up with the others in the vast field for the start. Recently he ran an exhibition of three miles in New York in 14.57.

The entries for the big grind will close February 13, with Pyle at his headquarters at the Vanderbilt Hotel in New York.

THAT was quite a slap at Tex Rickard that the good Signor Humbert Fugazy took the other day, when he announced plans for a heavyweight elimination of his own which bars out Jack Dempsey and some of the other talent that Rickard has been featuring in his endless tournaments. Fugazy says he is disgusted with the box office manipulating of the eliminations to date and will hold his own aat popular prices and expects Gene Tunney to recognize the survivor as a worthy challenger.

Fugazy is figuring on showing George Godfrey with Knute Hansen as his first opponent; Luis Firpo, the long-threatened "comeback;" Victor Campolo, the other South American menace; Roberto Roberti, the Italian, and a few others. Defeat will mean the definite elimination of any of the contenders.

The good senor has great hopes for Roberti, especially. This young giant has won 13 fights in a row since he arrived in this country and in his most recent start rallied from a nine-second knockdown in the first round and stopped Monte Munn in a bout in Boston. Doc Bagley, former manager of Tunney, is Roberti's pilot.

In outlining his plans, Fugazy refers to Rickard's tournaments as hippodromes and says he is confident Dempsey is absolutely through and doesn't dare to risk participation in warm-up bouts before being sent back against Tunney again for a big gate.

INCIDENTALLY, it is a fact that every man in the Rickard steam-up has been more or less eliminated by one process or another and that the array of talent is not strikingly impressive. Dempsey has been batted around twice by Tunney, Sharkey has lost to Dempsey and been held even by Tom Heeney, Heeney has had his troubles with Paulino and lost to Phil Scott, the English champion, overseas; Paulino is fearful only in reputation, having been walloped by Johnny Risko, Heeney and sundry others; Risko has lost to Heeney and others, Jack Delaney fizzled against Jim Maloney, who scintillated in the first of the eliminations and has been knocked out by everybody since then—and that's about all there is; there isn't any more.

early season setbacks, something unusual in Duquesne U basketball.

The best way in which the two fives can be compared in a pregame sense is to consider their respective contests with Bethany. Both met the Bisons on the Bison floor. The Dukes outsped Nuss' boys and ended up some dozen or more points to the good. The Jackets caught 'em on the rebound two or three nights later and were defeated by a single point. It might be remarked that the Dukes played Bethany the night following the Bisons' game with Wash-Jeff at Washington, and that they were probably not at their best.

Regardless of their records to date, the teams have much at stake tonight. A defeat for the Dukes will shove them down into second place in the Conference, below the up and coming United Presbyterians of Westminster. Neither team, Duquesne or Westminster, can afford to slip a point, for it is generally recognized that the two will fight it out for the Conference title this year, and a little headway now may eventually bring the championship.

ROSENBERG BACK

The Dukes' starting lineup is uncertain. Jock Rosenberg is back in shape and fit to play. He will likely be at one of the guards, where he belongs. His return to the lineup necessitates the shifting of either Stephens or Benedict to a forward. Stephens will probably get the call and will pair up with Losman. Vernon will be found at center, with Capt. Reich on the bench at the start.

Katy Easterday will send his veterans, Knox, White, Welsh and 'ole Hap Frank and the youngster, Elstrom, into the game at the start, and is very likely to keep 'em there.

In a second conference tussle tonight, Geneva will invade Wellsburg for a contest with Bethany, the first of three games listed in the circuit for the Bisons this week. The Duke-Waynesburg probable lineup:

Duquesne.		Waynesburg.
Losman	F	Elstrom
Stephens	F	White
Vernon	C	Knox
Rosenberg (A. C.)	G	Frank
Benedict	G	Welsh

Champs Must Risk Titles

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—(INS.)—Sixteen leading contenders who will be recognized by the National Boxing Association as challengers for the titles now held by Mickey Walker, Joe Dundee and Sammy Mandell have been named by Thomas E. Donohue, president of the N. B. A, which is attempting to force these reluctant champions into real competition. Five middleweights are eligible as Walker's challengers, five welterweights are considered worthy of Dundee's attention, and six lightweights are nominated as opposition for Mandell.

The middleweights are Jack McVey and George Courtney of New York, Dave Shade of California, Joe Anderson of Kentucky and the winner of the forthcoming battle between K. O. (Phil) Kaplan and Maxie Rosenbloom, both of New York.

Dundee may choose from among Sergt. Sammy Baker, New York; Ace Hudkins, Nebraska; Hilario Martinez, Spain; Tommy Freeman, Arkansas, and My Sullivan of Minnesota.

Mandell's rivals are Sid Terris, Bruce Flowers and Joey Kaufman, New York; Billy Wallace, Ohio; Louis (Kid) Kaplan, Connecticut, and Billy Petrole of North Dakota.

Early this month the National Boxing Association started a crusade against loafing and stalling champions who have long since been barred in New York, but who continued to operate in N. B. A. territory.

The national body does not attempt to select any challengers, but the three champions now under fire have been told they must agree by February 16 to defend their titles and must set the dates within a reasonable time. Failure to comply with this order will provoke indefinite suspension.

If Dundee can gain reinstatement in New York he will be matched with Hudkins or Baker.

of all, but, if that is impossible, he is ready to meet Dempsey in June or any time, but he is not going to go over the ground he already has covered," Buckley declared.

"Twenty-two out of 24 sporting writers gave Sharkey the decision in his 'draw' with Heeney and there is no question but that Jack is the logical contender.

"Risko is out and so is Delaney. Risko beat Delaney and so did Maloney, while Delaney has refused to box Risko at 15 rounds in New York State.

"We don't consider Delaney of any consequence. He has been meeting a lot of has-beens and setups and I wouldn't be surprised to hear that he had been matched to meet his own grandfather.

"Dempsey and Tunney say they are willing to fight. Well, Jack Sharkey is willing to accommodate them."

DELANEY FILES CHALLENGE

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—(AP.)—The heavyweight plot aimed at Gene Tunney's crown thickened today with a possibility of three champions-at-large in the event the present titleholder is not signed for the defense of his treasure by early summer.

Matching Jack Sharkey's challenge with the New York State Athletic Commission, Jack Delaney has issued a like defi at Tunney through the National Boxing Association, which has a membership in 26 states.

Delaney's challenge, however, according to his manager, Joe Jacobs, will be effective only on condition that Delaney knocks out Tom Heeney during their 15-round bout at Madison Square Garden on March 1.

BENTON, CUMMINGS SIGN

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Larry Benton, former Boston Brave's pitcher who was acquired by the New York Giants last season, and Jack Cummings, catcher and member of last year's squad, have been signed by the New York Giants for the 1928 season. The Giants now have contracts with Roush, Terry, Lindstrom, Jackson, Cummings and Benton, all members of the 1927 team.

DOELFELS TO MEET

The H. W. Doelfel baseball team will hold its first meeting of the year tomorrow at 7:15 p. m., at the Doelfel clubhouse, 112 Greenfield avenue. All members of last year's team are asked to attend.

SOCCER NEWS

by TOM BIRKS

ALL of the associated leagues in the district should be on hand for the special meeting of the Western Pennsylvania Football Association scheduled for this evening and presumably at the Hotel Henry. Vice-President Hillen stated that the session will be started at 8 p. m. All delegates should make a point to be on hand while the business is being conducted and they wil have a chance to straighten out anything that has happened in the past.

This is the regular monthly meeting of the association but while the usual business will be transacted, the business of the special letter drafted and acted upon by four of the leagues will probably be up for discussion. This session should do a lot of good to clear the air and from tomorrow evening until the end of the season soccer should go ahead with a rush.

There will be a special meeting of the American League at the usual time on tomorrow evening. It is expected that the German Club-Heidelberg tilt will occupy the limelight in this case. Seeing that President Hillen has called in all parties concerned a real meeting should ensue. And this case should be threshed out, so as to prevent any similar move.

TRIS STATES STAND

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 24.—(AP.)—Tris Speaker will make no overtures to the Washington baseball club in regard to a reduction in his salary. Neither has he considered any offers from minor clubs.

"If Griffith wants me back in a Senator uniform this season," Speaker said, "he naturally will send me a contract before February 1, when my option expires. If he does not, I will automatically become a free agent when the option expires."

As a Russian I have tried them all—the cigarettes of Cairo, Paris, London, Madrid—but here in my adopted country, America, I have found my favorite cigarette 'The Lucky Strike.' In addition to its lovely fragrance and wonderful flavor it has no bad effect upon my voice—so even when I go abroad I carry with me my little trunk of Luckies—and enjoy a puff from America."

How Common Is 7-Day Railroad Work? Presidents Tell

By B. C. FORBES

JUST how common is the seven-day week and the 365-day work-year on American railroads? Judging from letters received from presidents of important systems, the reply is "not half as common as letters published from railroad employes would indicate."

One thing the letters show is that certain railway presidents are distinctly keener than others to do away with seven-day work—partly on humanitarian grounds, partly because time-and-a-half rates have to be paid for certain kinds of Sunday work.

A HIGH place among the list of roads striving conscientiously to abolish the seven-day week, wherever possible, must be accorded the New York, New Haven and Hartford. President E. J. Pearson supplies figures showing that his employes work, on the average, somewhat less than 26 days in a 30-day month, surely a very creditable record. Replying to this column's request for information, President Pearson writes:

"Dear Mr. Forbes:

"Our forces are so arranged wherever practicable, and it has generally been found to be practicable, to avoid working the same men seven days each week. The general exceptions are our crossing flagmen and gatemen and the yard train and enginemen, although with the yardmen, where the full complement of week days is not required on Sundays, the men are alternated from week to week so as not to work the same men all of the time.

"As an example as to what we require insofar as our schedule regulations are concerned, I quote from several of our agreements:

"'Clerks—So far as practicable, consistent with requirements of the service, employes shall be allowed one day of rest (not necessarily Sundays), in seven.'

"'Telegraphers—Employes will be excused from Sunday and holiday duties as much as the condition of business will permit.'

"'Signalmen—Employes necessary to the continuous operation of the carrier will be assigned one regular day off duty in seven, Sunday, if possible.'

"At our roundhouses, where the forces are materially reduced on Sunday, the work is so arranged that the same individual will not work more than one Sunday out of three or four.

"Examining our reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission for November, 1927, the average number of days per month worked by the various groups follow: Clerical, 25.2; maintenance of way, 25.2; maintenance of equipment, 25.9; transportation, which comprises a total of 4,190 employes, including about 1,100 crossing men, 26.6; all employes, exclusive of train and enginemen, 25.8; train and enginemen, 24.9.

"Yours very truly,

"E. J. PEARSON."

H. E. Byram, chairman of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad, writes:

"Dear Mr. Forbes:

"I think you are mistaken about the wide prevalence of seven-day week employment on the railroads. There is, of course, a small percentage of our work which requires continuous service, but most of our employes do not work more than five and one-half days a week, and all of them are on an eight-hour basis.

"The employes who work on Sundays are those engaged in the operation of Sunday trains, but they constitute a very small proportion of our forces, and even in the jobs requiring continuous service, an opportunity is afforded the employes to lay off as frequently as they desire. Therefore, I think it is safe to say that none of our employes are required to work every day unless they want to.

"When I was young I worked 12 hours a day, Sunday included, for several years, which I did not feel was any particular hardship. Therefore, I can arouse very little sympathy for men who now work eight hours a day, even though they do work seven days a week. But, as stated above, none of them are obliged to work seven days a week unless they want to.

"Yours very truly,

"H. E. BYRAM."

That seven-day jobs are preferred to six-day jobs is brought out by presidents whose letters will appear later.

Air Reduction to Merge.

Merger of the Air Reduction Company and the United States Industrial Alcohol Company is expected to be effected some time this year.

General Baking Earnings Drop.

In 1927 the General Baking Corporation earned 33 cents a share on 1,571,644 class B shares, against $1.14 a share on 1,572,399 class A shares in 1926.

300-Mile Gas Line Planned.

Construction of one of the longest pipe lines in the United States is under consideration by directors of the Metropolitan Utility District of Omaha who plan to bring natural gas to the Nebraska city through a 300-mile line from Amarillo, Tex. Construction of the line would save consumers of Omaha $569,000 the first year of operation and would increase this saving to over $1,000,000 in the fifth year, it is said.

Salt Creek Operations Increase.

Casper, Wyo.,—refinery of Midwest Refining Company, subsidiary of Standard Oil Company of Indiana, is running over 20,000 barrels of crude daily, compared with recent operations of 16,000 barrels daily. This is requiring increased oil production from Salt Creek field, controlled by Salt Creek Producers Association and Mountain Producers Association. Salt Creek production was curtailed last year, the refinery filling orders from storage stocks. This resulted in reducing storage stocks of gasoline in Rocky Mountain district (practically all held at Casper) from approximately 3,150,000 barrels in April to 1,250,000 barrels in November, 1927.

Texas Oil Storage Tanks.

San Antonio—A contract has been let by the Magnolia Petroleum (Standard Oil of New York) and Atlantic Refining Company for additional storage facilities at their tank farms near Midland. Magnolia will build 10 55,000-barrel tanks and Atlantic eight of the same size.

P. R. R. Decreases Operating Ratio.

The Pennsylvania Railroad will show a decrease in operating ratio for 1927 which will mark the seventh consecutive year operating ratio has been lowered. Operating ratio for November was 76.5 per cent, which made the ratio for the first 11 months of 1927 75.92 per cent and with inclusion of December the ratio for 1927 should be slightly over the 76 per cent mark. This would compare with 77.58 per cent in 1926. This year efforts will be made to cut another one or two per cent from the operating ratio, and when it is considered that gross revenues of the Pennsylvania Railroad exceed $650,000,000 per annum, each cut of 1 per cent from operating ratio means a saving for net of $6,500,000 or more than 65 cents a share on 9,985,300 $50 par value shares outstanding.

Lehigh Valley Earnings Down.

Lehigh Valley Railroad is another hard coaler whose 1927 earnings reflect the year's anthracite depression. On the basis of the nine month's report to the Public Service Commission, showing a surplus after charges amounting to $2.64 a share, against $4.26 the previous year, and since reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission for October and November have shown decreases from 1926 in both gross revenues and net operating income, the road may be expected to show a net income for the year of $4,200,000, or the equivalent after preferred dividends, to $3.50 a share (par value $50) on 1,210,054 shares of common stock, compared with $8.27 in 1926. Reduction of $4.77 in share earnings is due principally to smaller anthracite revenues.

RAILS RALLY AS MARKET TURNS STRONG

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—(AP.)—The recovery in stock prices continued today with the leadership of the market switching from the pool specialties to the high grade investment industrials and rails. Easy call money rates, publication of several favorable 1927 earnings reports and the recent improvement in some of the basic industries continued to provide the background for the advance. Trading continued in fairly heavy volume with the market lapsing into dullness whenever reactionary tendencies developed.

There has been a marked absence of any concerted "bear" selling in recent sessions. However, the covering operations of many so-called amateur "shorts" have played a prominent part in the upswings of some of the pool favorites. In conservative quarters talk was heard of another increase in brokers' loans this week.

Express shares continued their sensational advance. Adams Express soared 24 points to 259, a new high record, and nearly 100 points above the low level of the month. American Railways Express climbed 15½ points and American Express 6½. The floating supply of all these issues is relatively small and little buying power is needed to bring about sharp advances.

United States Steel common and General Motors, which are being widely talked about as market leaders, met selling resistance on the way up and failed to participate extensively in the rally. Gold Dust, Rossia Insurance, Greene Cananea Copper, Warren Brothers, International Silver and Eastman Kodak all sold 4 to 8 points above yesterday's final quotations.

The rally in the rails was led by such high grade issues as Atchison, New York Central, Canadian Pacific and Southern Railway, but the gains were limited to a point or two. Bullish operations in the low price merger issues failed to make much progress.

Carnegie Metals Hits New High Price

Armstrong Cork sold at a new high record price on the local curb and Carnegie Metals, which was liberally dealt in on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange, soared to the highest figure ever quoted. Activity in the former is due to a pending split up of the shares on a four-for-one basis. Stockholders will be given valuable rights.

Carnegie Metals lagged somewhat at the start of the day's business, but trading in the issue became quite pronounced around midday, a number of good sized transactions being posted at the advance. There was actual bidding for the stock in blocks of 2,000 to 4,000 shares. It is reported that a pool is operating in the issue.

Other stocks did not do as well as Carnegie Metals. There was considerable business in United Engineering and Foundry at a slightly lower price than quoted yesterday. Lone Star Gas also was fairly active, that issue holding around recent levels. Business generally was brisk, with the actual transactions for the first two hours of the day's trading totaling as much as yesterday's five hours.

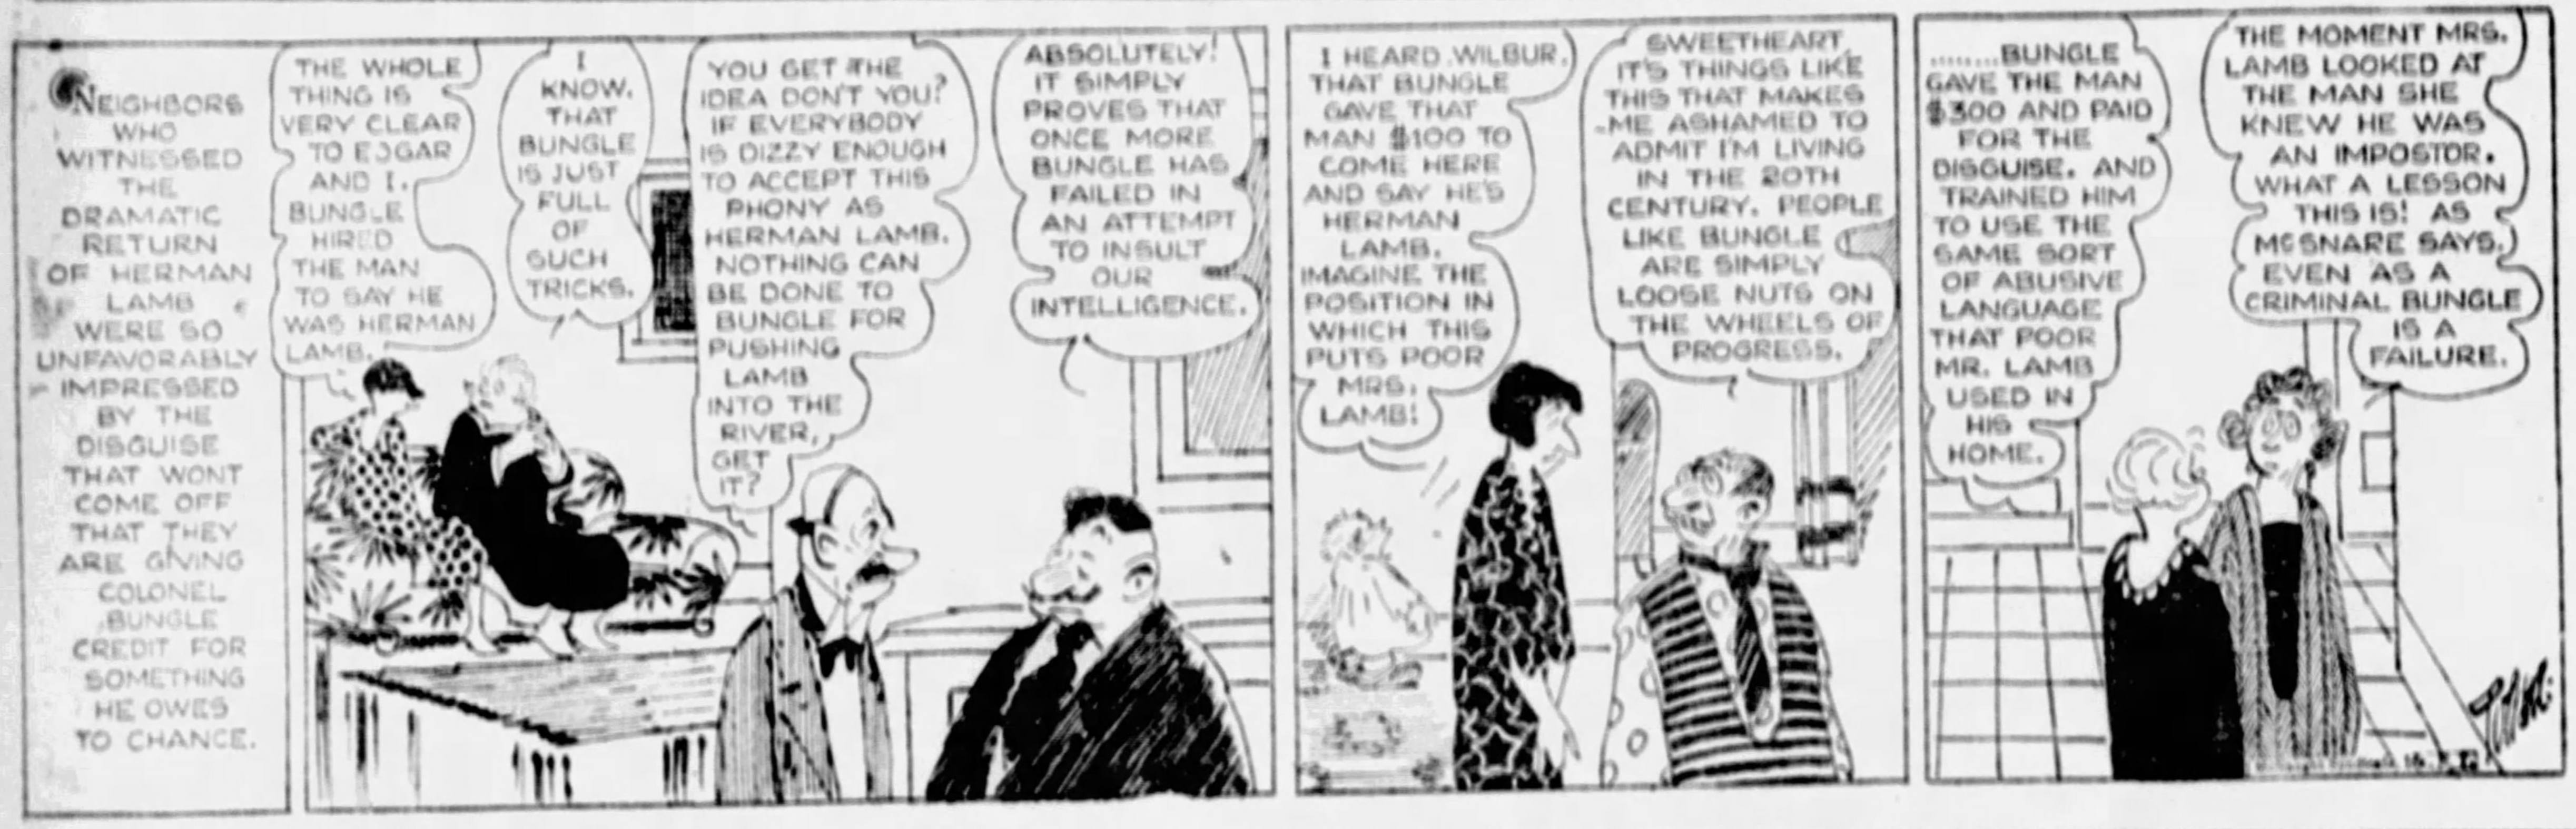
THE BUNGLE FAMILY · The Colonel Is Always Wrong



Neighbors who witnessed the dramatic return of Herman Lamb were so unfavorably impressed by the disguise that won't come off that they are giving Colonel Bungle credit for something he owes to chance.
The whole thing is very clear to Edgar and I. Bungle hired the man to say he was Herman Lamb.
I know. That Bungle is just full of such tricks.
You get the idea don't you? If everybody is dizzy enough to accept this phony as Herman Lamb, nothing can be done to Bungle for pushing Lamb into the river, get it?
Absolutely! It simply proves that once more Bungle has failed in an attempt to insult our intelligence.
I heard, Wilbur, that Bungle gave that man $100 to come here and say he's Herman Lamb. Imagine the position in which this puts poor Mrs. Lamb!
Sweetheart it's things like this that makes me ashamed to admit I'm living in the 20th century. People like Bungle are simply loose nuts on the wheels of progress.
……Bungle gave the man $300 and paid for the disguise, and trained him to use the same sort of abusive language that poor Mr. Lamb used in his home.
The moment Mrs. Lamb looked at the man she knew he was an impostor. What a lesson this is! As McSnare says, even as a criminal Bungle is a failure.

HUSH! FAINT MEMORIES ARE HAUNTING MR. FRISBY

By MR. FRISBY,
Congressman-at-Large.

WASHINGTON—This is the happy season of the year when one forgets worldly cares and turns his mind, so to speak, to the gentle thoughts of home and fireside. Ah…and it is the time of memories, precious memories?

How well I remember the first Christmas after we were married. The children's happy cries as they tore open their packages to find the ever-welcome hard candy, so gayly striped, and the crackling peanut! And how Mrs. Frisby beamed as she opened the little velvet-lined box that held the Mexican jumping bean I had fetched her from a distant clime.

Other Mrs. Frisbys have come and gone since that day. Oh, dear … this is a small world, after all. Yesterday, while demonstrating vacuum cleaners, I glanced o'er the eager faces and thought I recognized six or seven women who had once been proud to call themselves Mrs. Horace Frisby. They have gone their way and I mine … flinging care to the winds.

A tear slithers hesitatingly down my cheek. I smile through a mist of memories…has any one got the correct time?

Emb. Mom. Usher,
Emb. Mom. Theatre,
Sir—

I had finally washed and polished our car. It gleamed, gorgeous and immaculate for the first time in six months. I turned onto a side street, torn up, of course. Along came a delivery truck, swerving madly through a hole. A cyclone of mud spattered my car. I was furious. I forgot myself in the language I used at the driver when I dared him to stop. Imagine my speed and embarrassment when he not only stopped, but leaped from his seat.

ON "BEING PRUDENT"

It is a PITY, but too true,
That often a man's cardinal
VIRTUES bore a woman stiff.
If a man's middle name is
"PRUDENCE" nobody seems to CARE,
For prudence in a man suggests
A PRUNE to a girl. And though
Prunes are all right for BREAKFAST,
They'll never do for lunch
And dinner. To begin with,
A PRUDENT MAN will not
Promise things. This, of course,
Is EXASPERATING, for bang! goes
A woman's best ALIBI!
Then, too, he will THINK before,
AFTER, and probably AT the the time
When he should be PROVING that
Prudence is not ALL he has.
But a PRUNE, of course, cannot LOVE, or rather, cannot make
Love ATTRACTIVE. When a girl
Asks him if he will love her
FOREVER he says: "I'll TRY!"
If she asks him if he will
THINK of her OFTEN, he says:
"SOMETIMES!" Now WHAT can a
Girl do with a man who speaks
The TRUTH? Nothing that INTERESTS
Her. She might, of course, let him
Alone, but that would be PRUDENT
On her part. Usually when girls
Meet a man named "PRUDENCE"
They try to PUNCTURE his Vanity with pin-pricks.

Yeh, I found them a very secretive race. They knew all the good places to hunt and fish, but they would never tell me where they were
Keep off the grass

Yeh, they'd go away for days on a hunting or fishing expedition an' leave me behind in camp alone. They never took me along once
Beware of dogs
I don't think that was very hospitable besides being a bare-faced insult — why didn't you gather up your belongings and quit them?
That would'a've offended them as they didn't want me to leave

BUGS BAER Says

THE peace conference at Havana made a nice news reel. There was plenty of talking about peace, demonstrating that the only real peace is silence.

Twenty-one American republics were represented at the beefing, which indicates how this republic idea has spread since we first thought of it in 1776.

A republic is a small breathing space between a Senate and a House.

The United States is stepfather to the little freckled nations of South America. And we seem to be as popular as a beetle in a pie.

ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER.

The fact that the Monroe Doctrine still works is proof that good wine never turns to vinegar. But the junior slapping-American republics seem to resent our self-appointed guardianship. They claim that the only reason we feed the ostrich is because we want its beautiful feathers.

The Vermont cowboy pulled a great speech in Havana which 20 republics did not understand. The trouble with these polyglot seances is that the interpreter is always out to lunch.

However, the Havana peace conference must have been a success, because not one of the delegates was forced to hurry home to get his draft number.

It will be a lesson to the European diplomats of Lucerne, Geneva and The Hague. The hemisphere of republics will remain serene as the heifer of the contented cow until the Democrats hold their pieces convention at Houston.

We admit that we were unable to explain what the marines are doing in Nicaragua. What's more, we cannot even explain what Heflin is doing in Alabama.

The logical reason for our Nicaraguan week-end war is that Sandino claims to be president and that we are honoring him with 21 guns.

But no man can claim we are at war with Nicaragua until we think up a slogan for it. We haven't heard a marching song over the blue network. There hasn't been a Liberty bond stolen. Therefore there is no war.

It would be foolish anyway. How could a patriotic society girl knit a woolen sweater for the tropics?

There is no war. All that is happening is the bright boys of the marine's geography class are seeing the world.

Best Man for President Is Mr. Mellon; Draft Him!

There is just one man whom the Republicans should nominate for President. The fact that Mr. Mellon does not want to run is unimportant. He should be drafted.

The truth is that Mr. Mellon's unwillingness is one of his recommendations.

No great corporation would put at its head a man who sought the job, building up an organization to put him in office and lobbying for the votes of the board of directors.

This would be the way NOT to get elected president of a business. Its directors pick a man not on the basis of his protestations, but on the basis of his accomplishments as a successful executive.

The United States Government is the greatest business in the world. Since 1920 the Republican National Convention has been the board of directors picking the president, and their choice has been ratified by the people, who are the stockholders of the corporation known as the United States of America.

Judged by the standards of accomplishment, Mr. Mellon stands alone among Republican possibilities for the presidential nomination. The Republican party's record of swelling prosperity the last seven years IS mainly the record of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon's masterly handling of the public finances.

Since Mr. Mellon came into office, on March 4, 1921, the public debt has been reduced six thousand million dollars, dropping from twenty-four thousand million to its present level of eighteen thousand million. The annual interest charges on the debt are today two hundred and seventy-five million dollars a year less than they were in 1921.

This unprecedented reduction of the national debt has not been accomplished by raising the taxes. They have been successively lowered. There were drastic cuts in the income tax rates made in the revenue law of 1921, further cuts in 1924, and still further cuts in 1926. The Federal budget, which was sixty-five hundred million dollars in 1920, was only thirty-five hundred million dollars in 1927.

As a result of the exemptions provided in the 1926 revenue act, almost two million citizens were relieved of paying any income tax, leaving only two and a half million individual income taxpayers to contribute from this source to the support of the Federal Government.

A married man with no children and a net income of $4,000 a year was paying $120 in annual income tax when Mr. Mellon came into office. He now pays $5.63 a year.

The nation is benefited by having as its business and financial manager the best brains available. The man who individually is responsible for the tremendous prosperity of the last seven years should receive the reward which such public services deserve. Why should the public, having once experienced the best in government, be satisfied with anything less?

Life Sentence Certainty Would End Death Chair

W. Rody Ruttenbusch, Pittsburgh lawyer, has addressed a communication to the Allegheny County Bar Association and to State Senators, representing senatorial districts of the county, a proposal to make the life imprisonment sentence for first degree murder more effective.

Under the law, juries in murder cases fix the degree of the crime. If the verdict be first degree, the jury decides whether the punishment shall be electrocution or life imprisonment. Mr. Ruttenbusch recommends that the jury be empowered also to say whether the one found guilty shall ever be eligible for parole or pardon.

There are many persons who do not believe in capital punishment, yet who regard the crime of murder with such abhorrence that they feel it should be expiated through some extreme penalty. As far as protection of society is concerned and the meeting of its demand that commensurate punishment be meted, life imprisonment answers, but there must be certainty of execution of the sentence. Provide that and society as a whole will insist that life imprisonment supplant the horrors of the chair.

As far as the Mosaic law is involved, life imprisonment meets the demand of "a tooth for a tooth." For a life taken, the state takes a life in every respect except the extinguishment of the vital spark, when life imprisonment is imposed. The possibility of pardon is one defect in such procedure. It should be removed either by the way Mr. Ruttenbusch suggests or some other.

If a man is guilty of murder he should be punished as the law provides. If not guilty, he should be freed. That should be developed at his trial. If there be later evidence that he is unjustly imprisoned, that should be developed, not before a pardon board, not before a merciful governor, but again before a judge and jury.

Chance Now to Abolish 'Lame Duck' Congresses

It looks as if the House of Representatives would join the Senate in passing the very necessary amendment to the Constitution abolishing "lame duck" sessions. Only four votes in the Senate could be mustered against the proposal.

This is the fourth time that the Senate has passed this measure. The only reason it has not passed the House is that the powerful Rules Committee has not let it come to vote. This year the House Committee on Election of President and Vice President have already voted to report the bill. It is thus a subject for House attention so early in the session that the Rules Committee will not have the shadow of an excuse for smothering it.

It is the chief governmental reform required at Washington. It will cause Congress to assemble early in the January following November elections, instead of assembling thirteen months after election as at present. It will abolish the present "short session" that comes every two years, with its "lame duck" Senators and Congressmen, filibustering and hasty or uncompleted legislation.

It's up to the House leaders.

Loans for Homes

Sixteen hundred thousand homes, or about sixteen hundred homes per day, were built or bought through funds supplied by the 12,710 building and loan associations of the United States in 1927. The associations have a combined membership of 11,305,000, with the average savings held per member at $624.72. Residential building was well maintained throughout the year, being only 4 per cent less than in 1926. The total mortgage loans made by the combined associations in the year was $2,110,600,000. The amortized loan is attractive to the wage earner as a means of becoming a home owner.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Bobbing the Days

THE following is typical of several inquiries lately received:

"Why is the day first observed to lengthen at the evening end, after the winter solstice, and to shorten at the morning end following the summer solstice?"

This seems to be a subject difficult to explain clearly. It involves the somewhat complicated relations between "mean time" and "sun, or true, time." "Sun time," unfortunately, is irregular, for reasons arising from the eccentricity of the earth's orbit and the inclination of the plane of the orbit to the plane of the equator ("obliquity of the ecliptic"), which I shall not dwell upon here. Enough that we must have an unvarying time standard for our uses, and this can only be obtained by imagining a fictitious sun to take the place of the real sun and to travel through the sky at a perfectly uniform and unchanging rate. All clocks, watches and other timepieces are set to this artificial standard, which is called "mean time."

Now, "mean time" differs from sun time except at four points in the year, viz: April 15, June 14, September 1 and December 24. The two times are widest apart February 11, when the difference is about fourteen and one-half minutes and November 2, when the difference is about sixteen and one-third minutes.

"Mean noon," or clock noon, is supposed to divide the daylight period into two equal parts, but the division is far from accurate except at the four yearly periods mentioned above. At all other times, the sun comes to the meridian, or noon line, either ahead of, or behind, the clock hand. When it arrives ahead, the real noon occurs sooner than the clock noon. But it is the clock noon that counts for us, and thus we add sometimes as much as a quarter of an hour to the forenoon and subtract the same amount from the afternoon.

Thus, since sunrise and sunset are natural phenomena, conspicuous enough to be beyond the range of camouflage, we find a noticeable inequality between the two "halves" of the day, the afternoon light being curtailed as much as half an hour compared with the forenoon. This occurs, as you can see by the diagram, at the beginning of November. At that time the sun is running about sixteen minutes ahead of the clock.

Now, looking at the diagram again, you will see that on December 24 the difference between sun time and clock time has vanished, so that the clock hand and the sun in the sky both cross the noon line together.

But in that quarter of the year occurs the reversal in the total length of the day period caused by the sun changing its course from a southerly to a northerly declination at the winter solstice. The day (meaning the daylight half of the twenty-four hours) has been shortening since the autumn equinox, but now, only a couple of days before the last period in the year when sun time and clock time agree, the daylight begins to lengthen, because the sun falls behind the clock hand on the noon line, and the afternoon light is, in consequence, prolonged, or lasts a longer time by the clock, while the forenoon shortens.

The diagram is drawn to show the effect of this reversal at its extreme, on February 11, when the sun has fallen about a quarter of an hour behind the clock. As a reference to the four dates of zero difference between solar and "mean time" will show, there is another similar situation about the time of the summer solstice, when the sun, having been fast from April 15 to June 14, falls behind again until late in July.

Free-Handed America

RECORDS show that 1927 was the biggest "gift year" in the history of the country. Two hundred millions given away and several foundations are yet to report. Many private givers make no report at all.

To these great known benefactions for the year should be added the money that Americans give away, spend, squander and throw away in Europe. Then the sum total will reach a half billion. For a hard-boiled egg and tightwad, Uncle Shylock seems to be stepping out some.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Thinking Wins

YOU may be a hard worker, you see others who do not work as hard, yet they have made more advancement and you wonder why.

You think you never had a fair chance and you believe that others must have had opportunities that have never come to you.

Have you ever considered to the point where you realize that the successful ones you know, may have directed their efforts with more thought?

Usually the difference between success and failure is measured by the quality of thought that is given to a proposition.

It matters not how hard you work if you don't direct your efforts.

Too many persons think success is measured by physical movement.

But a little consideration ought to convince you that the one who puts the best thought back of his efforts, reaps the biggest success.

To some persons, thinking is more difficult than working and therefore they accept the easier way—with the usual poor reward.

Tales That Are Told

In the Case

ONE of the spectators at a football match had had his pocket picked. As the thief was bolting, he collared him and escorted him to a policeman.

"You say this man stole your watch," said the policeman. "What distinguishing feature was there about the watch?"

"It contained my sweetheart's photograph," replied the man.

"Ah, I see! A woman in the case."

Why a Statesmen?

THIS is told of a distinguished statesman. He left his office one morning to catch a train. A few hours later he telephoned his secretary in Whitehall:

"Springer," said he, "why am I in Birmingham?"

His secretary's voice showed anguish.

"You should have gone to Bradford, sir, to make a speech," he replied.

The statesman reached his destination only just in time.—London Tit-Bits.

In Leap Year?

THEY sat silently for a long time, then the youth pulled his tie a little tighter, hitched up his trousers, and spoke a little nervously.

"What are you thinking about?" he asked. He knew he had to say something. It seemed expected of him.

The maiden turned an innocent eye upon him. Then she looked away, blushed, and moved uneasily in her chair.

"Never mind," she answered sharply. "It's your business to propose, not mine."

WOULD THEN advance.

AND THE dog would paw her.

WITH HIS two front feet.

AND THEN go on.

JUST A few steps more.

AND ALL the time.

THE LINE of autos.

AND PASSING them.

THEY'D REACHED a point.

HALF WAY across.

AND THE dog then turned.

TO GIVE attack.

TO THE other line.

AND STANDING firm.

WITH EACH advance.

THE BARKING dog.

AND THE little old lady.

STOOD ON the curb.

THEY HAD started for.

OR I SHOULD say.

THAT THE little old lady.

WHILE THE barking dog.

AS TALL as she.

WHEN HE stood erect.

WAS DOING his best.

TO KNOCK her down.

WITH HIS two front paws.

AND FAILING in that.

THE TWO of them.

WENT ON their way.

I THANK you.

New York Day by Day
by
O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The job of being a waitress in New York continues to improve as a calling. Formerly the ladies engaged in "dealing 'em off the arm" featured peroxided hair, a gold tooth and a brisk line of snappy chatter. They were known as "biscuit shooters" or "hash slingers."

Their occupational status was somewhat akin to their brothers who drove trucks. Most of them were employed in so-called grease parlors or dirty spoon restaurants of the Bowery and East Side. They wore plaid skirts, chewed gum and were "dese" and "dose" talkers patently on the mash.

Better sort of places employed only men to wait on tables. Today the waitress is on duty in magnificent establishments on Fifth, Park and Madison avenues. She comes often from the refined atmosphere of a select school to grace the job.

She has poise plus and seems not one whit ashamed to wear her rather charm-revealing uniform. Nor need she be for it is said in some of the places featuring $2.50 and $3 dinners there are waitresses whose incomes often total $60 a week.

And a number of these girls have been able to acquire a stake in a short while sufficient to take over a tea room of their own. In one restaurant a few steps from Forty-second street, three waitresses have become the wives of successful men whom they served.

There are several hostesses or supervisors who are graduates of Vassar and other toney schools. A certain physical beauty is an essential for the job of waitress in the best establishments. All have appearance of being alert and obliging without being servile.

In some restaurants one sees on an engraved table card that "This table is presided over by Miss Mary Smith." The hostesses address them as "Miss." It is also noticed the places offering this sort of refinement among its waitresses are packed.

There is a story of a very rich man whose daughter married out of her religious faith and the union was a great disappointment to the parent. Yet in his town and country homes her rooms are just as she left them and always ready for her return. The light in the window stuff.

Another yarn concerns an estimable gentleman whose wife left him suddenly and showed up in Reno for a divorce. The day it was received she married a man of no standing with a doubtful past. The first husband had during their married life given her an allowance of $1,000 a month. He has continued it every month since and she has accepted it. The divorce took place six years ago.

The most popular vegetable dish of the season continues to be broccoli served hot with Hollendaise. The man who now orders an artichoke is looked upon in the same manner as those lads with the circular haircut who order planked steaks.

My experience with the first artichoke is nothing to crow about. I had it on my plate cutting it into sizeable bites when I happened to glance at a neighbor who was daintily stripping the leaves and touching them to the sauce. That has been fewer years ago than I care to radio.

* * *

In these days, however, I do not believe any one is exactly sure of himself among various knives, forks and spoons flanking either side of the plate at dinners classed as smart. You see a lot of fumbling and sidewise squints among those supposed to know what it is all about.

* * *

Yet table manners are important in this phase of what Dr. Durant quaintly calls civilization. A noted opera singer about to go on an extended and money making tour had practically decided on a business manager at a figure that would total a small fortune in two years. At the final conference he was her host at dinner. He ate with his knife. That ended all relations.

Singing

By DR. FRANK CRANE

People spend a vast deal of money every year in listening to singing.

But the trouble is they simply listen to it. They are auditors and not singers.

We like to crowd the bleachers, watch baseball and football and tennis games, and we like to go to grand opera and concerts and vaudeville and hear them sing.

But the best part of singing is the reaction upon the singer himself.

We are notoriously bad singers.

We hire choirs in churches to sing for us when we ought to be singing ourselves.

Do it yourself, is the best advice in physical culture.

Let us not have so many things done for us, but do them ourselves, and we will be better off. It may be pleasant to have a masseur or a masseuse work at you, but the best form of exercise is automotive.

Get out and take a walk or play a game or do something that starts the sweat and thus improve the eliminating system of the body, something that circulates the blood rapidly.

Exercise should be taken judiciously, of course, but the best form of exercise is mild exercise which you do regularly. Irregular exercise or exercise once in awhile is about as good as none at all.

Many people are constantly making spurts towards physical culture, but spurts are not what we need. We require regularity.

Take any form of physical exercise, any system, for they all embrace about the same points, only adopt some system that will bring the unused muscles of the body into play.

There is no better healthful exercise than singing, provided we do the singing ourselves.

Public school teachers tell us that almost any number of youths can be taught to sing, and it is an art that we should all cultivate.

There is no better music than congregational singing.

The Germans, all of them, can sing their national hymn, and the British non-conformist congregations are vocal.

We alone are too much inclined to be mere auditors and not doers.

Right Angles

Leisure and Idleness

one's ability to distinguish between leisure and idleness.

And that twain are quite as antipodal as noted and notorious, or famous and infamous.

Two heroines of the shops have each an unexpected day at their disposal. Watch them now with an hour glass as a metronome.

Jennie paints and powders, and gads and gallops, and smiles and smirks, and rushes and gushes. No relaxation, no recuperation, no scaling of the altitudes of art or intellect. And she takes back to her task half a worker's energy. That's idleness.

Julia, more charming in her pristine beauty, revels in an extra hour of morning sleep; uses a forenoon hour with her deft needle; cuddles in her cozy corner chair with a favorite author or two; emulates the boy scouts with a dozen good turns about the home; has a little bridge and dancing in the afternoon, and in the evening enriches her soul with opera or drama. And she takes back to her task a worker's double energy, recruited during her off-day. That's leisure.

It has ever been an orthodox tenet with the philosophers that leisure is essential to culture; that education was born of surplus wealth; that in the margin of wealth over need lay all the possibility of art and letters and esthetics.

But the margin of idleness is the margin of crime. "Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do." Watts, the hymn writer, said that, and it would be no truer if uttered by Plato or Pythargoras.

Fortunes of cash and culture are frequently founded on leisure. Millionaires of ideas serve their apprenticeship on off days while idleness loafs and lolls. Many of the gray-haired bread liners started as yellow-haired loafers. Guido says, "Idleness is hunger's mother."

That great Roman general, Scipio, whose name was given the appendage, Africanus, because of his conquests in Africa, was evidently an epigrammatist of good caliber. Just watch him squeeze a lexicon into a sentence:

"I am never less at leisure than when at leisure, nor less alone than when I am alone."

Godey's Lady's Book

ON WINTER days when north wind wails,
Around each leafless nook,
I find a joy that never fails
In Godey's Lady's Book.

Genteel and sweet, the faces smile
From out each printed page;
Then caps and hoops were just in style
And pantalets the rage.

The tales it tells are saccharine,
Demure each maiden's mood,
No cigarets to mar a scene
Victorian and good.

No hint of murder or divorce,
These were not being done;
Life took, those days, a seemly course,
In Godey's 'sixty-one.
